Getting Even With U. S. A. Mr. Stathakis' Barrel.

—By ARTHUR BRISBANE—

THERE IS NO really important news for you, this Monday morning, except that Mrs. Thornton, who runs the Gunning River poultry farm, near Barnegat, N. J., not far from the Lakewood telegraph office where this is written, says she gets fifteen per cent more eggs by turning on the radio in the hen house at three a. m.

SCIENCE SAYS it is simple. The hen gets up earlier, because she likes the music, or more probably, intelligent creature, she buries her ears in the straw of her nest and lays an egg, from habit. With electric light turned on them until late at night, and music starting at 3 a. m., the hen can sympathize with the modern American business man.

IT IS ALWAYS dangerous, however, to say that there is no important news. Louis XVI went shooting at Fontainebleu one day toward the end of the Eighteenth Century. He shot nothing and wrote in his diary the one word RIEN, meaning "Nothing." And that day, as it happened, was the July fourteenth on which the Bastile prison was torn down, starting the revolution that cut off Louis' head.

He would not have written "Rien" could he have looked ahead, poor man.

MRS. EMILY NEWELL BLAIR, eight years vice chairman of the Democratic National Committee, sees "light in the darkness, sailor." She thinks Mr. Hoover will not run again, in 1932. Coolidge or Morrow will be nominated, tariff and not prohibition will be the issue, and maybe a Democrat will be elected.

IT IS A BIG MAYBE; and tariff will not push prohibition out of first place. The tariff, for the average man, is a matter of theory, vague, like the Monroe Doctrine.

Prohibition is a matter of fact, and opinions concerning it are definite.

MANY WORKERS believe that it has something to do with the present lack of jobs. They cannot exactly tell why, but "times seem to have been better when there was no prohibition."

AND ONLY a little while ago, with everything booming, savings banks bursting, wages going up, you were told that Prohibition had done all that.

Others believe that excessive income tax, discouraging new enterprises, encouraging government extravagance with its annual billions of intake, puts a damper on national effort.

Something seems to be wrong for the moment, and nobody knows what or why.

When all went well, everybody could explain it.

"GETTING EVEN with the United States" is not simple.

Our tariff annoys Europe, and Europe would like to retaliate. But how?

ITALY RAISED her tariff on automobiles to impossible heights. We make nearly all of Europe's low price cars, so that seemed a good idea.

But France complains and says to Italy:

"We must have some carefully worked out general plan. Your new tariff hurts us."

FORD MAKES an arrangement with the great Isotta Fraschini Motor Company and will make his car inside the Italian tariff wall, in Milan.

Mr. Sloan, of General Motors, is understood to have made arrangements for manufacturing in Italy, long ago.

A FRENCH authority says Europe's nations must work together, for:

"If one day it comes to commercial competition between the United States on the one hand a number of competing states of Europe not united on the other, the prosperity of Europe will be ended."

GEORGE E. STATHAKIS, of Buffalo, cook by trade and philosopher by ambition and profession, made an oak barrel, got in and went over the Horse Shoe Falls at Niagara, to his death. One of his fellow countrymen, another Greek philosopher, more than 2,000 years ago jumped into the crater of Vesuvius, disappearing forever, or at least until the Judgment Day.

He wanted to impress the multitude, and, like the man that "fired the Ephesian dome," he has been more talked about than men more deserving.

STEVE BRODIE, of our land, known as the Brooklyn Bridge jumper, gained fame and large receipts for his saloon on the Bowery, running no risk at all. His friends threw a well-weighted dummy off the bridge. He was waiting in the water to be picked up.

Reporters that knew did not care to spoil a story and disappoint Brodie, so he spent the rest of his life telling Bowery visitors from the country that "every man should take a chance once."

He went over Niagara Falls in the same fashion—a dummy was put in the barrel, while he, below the falls, waited in a similar barrel, to be "rescued."

AMONG WOMEN fliers, American girls shine as individuals, but have not taken to flying on a big scale. Only 208 American women have licenses to fly, only 34 have flown at once more than ten hours. British women take flying more seriously and enthusiastically, perhaps because British girls

Senate, Mustering Quorum, Told in Message to Take London Treaty or Nothing

By GEORGE R. HOLMES,
International News Service.

WASHINGTON, July 7.—President Hoover sent a vigorous message to the Senate today, advocating prompt and unconditional ratification of the London Naval Treaty.

So far as he is concerned, he indicated, the Senate can take the treaty as brought home by the American delegates from London or no treaty at all. He declared:

"The question before us now is not whether we shall have a treaty with either three more eight-inch cruisers or four less six-inch cruisers, or whether we shall have a larger reduction in tonnage. It is whether we shall have this treaty or no treaty."

BARE QUORUM PRESENT

The President's message was read to an attentive chamber that contained 58 of the 96 members—nine more than the requisite quorum. It had remained doubtful, up to the last minute, whether the Senate would be able to function today, but diligent efforts on the part of both Republican and Democratic leaders drew the absentees back from seashore and other retreats in time for the initial roll call.

Mr. Hoover not only explained the terms of the treaty in his message, but endeavored to answer some of the criticisms of the part which have been voiced by admirals of the Navy and Senatorial opponents for the last three months.

MISREPRESENTED BY FOES

The treaty, he said, has been misrepresented by its foes, asserting:

"We must naturally expect opposition from those groups who belive in unrestricted military strength as an objective of the American nation. Indeed we find the same type of minds in Great Britain and Japan.

But, he warned, the alternative to this treaty is competitive build-

19 OVERCOME IN IRWIN FILM FIRE

Lightning Starts $75,000 Blaze; Inhalators Rushed From Here Save Victims

By CHARLES A. EARLEY,
Staff Correspondent.

IRWIN, Pa., July 7.—Nineteen Irwin firemen were overcome early today when lightning struck a photographic studio and burning film released a gas which asphyxiated the firemen as they attempted to battle the flames.

One of the victims, William Boyd, was rushed to the Westmoreland Hospital at Greensburg.

VICTIMS REVIVED

Called to the scene, Gus McClellan, of the Mine Safety Appliance Company, Pittsburgh, worked over the prostrate firemen with inhalators. Many of them were unconscious for more than half an hour.

It was impossible to revive Boyd at the scene and he was taken to the hospital, where he regained consciousness several hours later.

BUILDING DESTROYED

The building struck by lightning housed the Kaplan millinery store on the first floor and the real estate office of Notary Russell Schode and the Frank Carson photographic studio on the second floor.

The building was virtually destroyed by the flames.

S. W. Kaplan, owner of the building, estimated the loss at $75,000.

The firemen attempted to battle their way to the picture studio, where the fire originated. As they ascended to the second floor, however, they faced a barrage of gas released by the burning film.

FALL ON STAIRWAY

Some of the firemen collapsed in the stirway and were dragged to safety by their companions.

Fire Chief M. T. Runt, one of the victims, was unconscious for 55 minutes.

Jinx Pursues New Yorker on Canoe Trip; Grid Career Ended in Pittsburgh Game

International News Service.

BRIDGTON, Me., July 7.—Hard luck, always a jinx for Al Lassman, famous New York University grid star, whose athlete career was ended by injuries suffered in a football game in Pittsburgh, pursued him into the great North woods of Maine and today had cost his life by accidental drowning from a canoe in Long Lake.

The verdict was rendered by Dr. Irving E. Mabry, medical examiner, following an inquest held several hours after the body had been taken from the bottom of the lake.

Dr. Mabry intimated Lassman might have suffered a slight heart shock, such trouble having developed following his football injuries. His arms were poised as if still paddling the canoe, but the paddle had left his hands.

The body was prepared for removal to Boston. His mother and sister live there.

Talk of suicide was scouted by Lassman's friends, who said he had completely recovered from the brain operation in New York performed after his football injury in a game against Carnegie Tech in 1928. They said that of late he had suffered heart attacks. The canoe in which he was last seen was found floating bottom-side up. According to all accounts, Lassman had gone out on the lake after the passing of a storm.

RECOVERY WAS SLOW

Alfred C. Lassman was 24, stood six feet four inches, weighed 220 pounds and was a tackle with New York University for three years. After the 1928 game with Carnegie Tech, he lay

Blonde's Hearing Delayed to Friday

NEW CASTLE, July 7.—(INS.)—Hearing of the appeal of Irene Schroeder, blonde gunwoman, and W. Glen Dague, alleged accomplice, from their conviction of the murder of State Patrol Corporal Paul Brady today was postponed until Friday.

The hearing was to have begun tomorrow before Lawrence County Judge R. L. Hildebrand, but because of the death of a niece of Benjamin Jerrett, of defense counsel, the postponement was made.

Tours to Europe Pay America, Coolidge Says

NORTHAMPTON, Mass., July 7.

To the Editor of the Sun-Telegraph:

It is estimated that our tourists will spend about five hundred million dollars in Europe this season. That money would employ half a million people at the rate of one thousand dollars per year. It is about twice the amount Europe is paying our government on the debt settlement. Some of these travelers may not give a correct impression of our country.

CALVIN COOLIDGE

Yet on the whole this will have to be considered a good investment. It is difficult to say that the advantages which accrue to international trade and finance do not balance the benefits that would be derived from the same expenditure at home.

Travel is a great civilizer. If few Europeans know much about the United States it is of all the more benefit to us that so many of our people are gaining a wide acquaintance with them.

While our tourists will find many things to admire and some to emulate, a careful investigation will convince them that the general condition of the people of their own country is unsurpassed.

They will return for the most part more content with their own institutions, more loyal to their own government, more devoted to their own faith. Those who do not will not be of great consequence.

CALVIN COOLIDGE.

ASK THOMPSON BARE COAL DEAL

UNIONTOWN, Pa., July 17.—To secure a postponement of his hearing set for today before Judge J. W. Dawson to determine whether an extension of time should be granted or the former coal baron sent to jail for contempt of court, J. V. Thompson today must disclose the reputed $20,000,000 alleged coal deal which have won several postponements.

Opposition to any further delay was so bitter this morning that Judge Dawson ordered a postponement until this afternoon when Mr. Thompson is to be called before counsel for the Princess of Thurn and Taxis and the Emma Messmore estate and convince them, if possible, that there is a legitimate coal deal pending and that its chances for consummation are bright.

ASK 4 WEEKS DELAY

Counsel for Thompson asked that the hearing be continued for four weeks on account of the illness of W. C. McKean, chief coun-

CONAN DOYLE, NOVELIST, DIES

LONDON, July 7.—(INS.)—Sir Arthur Conan Doyle, noted novelist and spiritualist and creator of the world-famed "Sherlock Holmes," died here today at the age of 71.

Conan Doyle

Sir Arthur's death occurred at his country home, Windlesham, near Crowborough, Sussex. His wife and three children were with him when he died.

His passing was a shock to the country. He had been in fair health during the last few months, although a year ago he was forced to take a journey to South Africa because of his general condition.

DUE TO HEART ATTACK

Sir Arthur's death resulted from a heart attack. Although no great improvement had been shown recently, the end was unexpected.

He was one of the most colorful figures in English life, as well as one of the most famous. No English writer, with the possible exception of Rudyard Kipling, was better known or more widely read, and although during the last few years he had definitely

Word From Conan Doyle's Spirit Awaited by Family

LONDON, July 7.—(AP.)—The family of Sir Arthur Conan Doyle today expressed the belief that their father would communicate with them from the spirit world as he had promised.

Adrian Conan Doyle, son of the novelist and spiritualist, when asked if his father had spoken of communicating with his family after his death, said:

"Why, of course. My father fully believed that when he passed over he would continue to keep in touch with us. All his family believe so, too.

"There is no question that my father will often speak to us just as he did before he passed over. We will always know when he is speaking, but one has to be careful, because there are practical jokers on the other side, as there are here."

NEW YORK, July 7.—(AP.)—Four weeks ago, fearing he had not long to live, Sir Arthur Conan Doyle wrote to a mutual acquaintance in New York about his long debate in spiritualism with the late Harry Houdini.

Conan Doyle and Houdini were intimate friends, but for 15 years they differed almost bitterly about spiritualism. The author wrote:

"I expect to talk it all over with Houdini in person before very long. I view the prospect with perfect equanimity. That is what psychic research does for one."

FORCED RESIGNATION OF HUSTON EXPECTED BY THURSDAY

HOOVER ACTS TO PLACATE LEADERS

Republican Chairman Mum, After White House Talk, On Report He Will Quit

International News Service

WASHINGTON, July 7.—The resignation of Claudius H. Huston as chairman of the Republican National Committee probably will be announced Thursday—if not before—it was learned today.

The beleaguered chairman has had a personal interview with President Hoover at the White House and, although neither would discuss the conference today, the understanding is that President Hoover convinced his friend continuance in the chairmanship is impossible.

FIRST IN MANY WEEKS

This meeting between the President and the man he elevated to the chairmanship was the first in many weeks. It followed a week-end conference at the Hoover fishing camp along the Rapidan. Party leaders then urged Mr. Hoover to take the initiative in ousting the chairman before the campaign gets further under way.

Reluctantly, the President is said to have agreed. He and the national chairman have been friends for many years. Huston became an assistant secretary of commerce under Hoover several years ago, and was one of the prominent managers of his pre-convention campaign.

Party leaders have been calling for Huston's resignation ever since the Senate Lobby Committee unearthed his activities on behalf of the Tennessee River Improvement Association, in connection with the private leasing of Muscle Shoals and his temporary diversion of part of the funds he raised to his personal stock market account.

EXPECTED THURSDAY

The showdown probably will come Thursday. On that date Huston has called a meeting of officers of the Republican National Committee and the chairmen of the congressional campaign committees. This originally was set for today, but postponed because, it was said, several of those invited refuse to attend so long as Huston is chairman.

The White House was silent about the meeting between the President and Huston, and the latter also was uncommunicative. All he would say, in reference to reports of his quitting, was:

"I will neither affirm nor deny any reports of that nature. I have no statement to make."

LINK NUTT WITH POWER TRUST

WASHINGTON, July 7.—Power trust affiliations of Joseph R. Nutt, of Cleveland, Republican national treasurer, have come to light in the midst of the fight to force out Claudis H. Huston, national chairman, it was learned today. Nutt has been among those mentioned as a possible successor to Huston.

Nutt got a profit of $295,000 in stock as one of the promoters of a reorganization deal engineered by the Electric Bond and Share Company, according to Federal Trade Commission records.

These indicate he has been associated with the power interests for 18 years. He is listed as a director of the Northern Ohio Power and Light Company, a large system controlled indirectly by the Morgan interests and the Electric Bond and Share Company.

He also is a director of a subsidiary of the American Power and Light Company, one of the Electric Bond and Share holding companies, according to the records.

turned from writing and spent his entire time in the study and propagation of spiritualism, he still remained, and probably always will remain, known to the world as the creator of Sherlock Holmes, genius in the art of scientific deduction and detective without a peer.

Sir Arthur was born in Edinburgh, May 22, 1859. He studied for medicine, and his learning in this science cropped up continually in the fantastic adventures of his fiction detective.

PRACTISED FOR YEARS

He practised as a physician for many years before giving himself over to fiction writing, but together with his unfillable place in English letters he combined such varied enterprises as exploration, travel and politics.

His travels included trips into the Arctic regions and to the West coast of Africa at a time when the latter was truly the Dark Continent, virtually untouched save by the most hardy adventurers.

His first important literary work was the world-famous "Study in Scarlet," in which he introduced to an admiring world for the first time the colorful figures of Sherlock Holmes and the ubiquitous Dr. Watson.

PROLIFIC AS WRITER

This was in 1887. The next year saw publication of "Micah Clarke." In 1889, he wrote his famous collection of detective stories under the title of "The Sign of the Four," and in 1891 came further doings of Sherlock Holmes in the volume "The Adventures of Sherlock Holmes."

Plays, novels, novelettes, short stories, essays, treatises and articles flowed from his pen, including works on war and politics.

Ten years ago, Conan Doyle deserted Sherlock Holmes and gave over his entire time to the study of spiritualism. His experiments with ectoplasm and spirit photographs attracted world-wide attention.

He had received his knighthood from King Edward in 1902.

HOLD HEARING ON RAIL LINK

A hearing is to be held here Wednesday by the Public Service Commission on the petition of the Monessen and Southwestern railroad for sanction to extend its tracks from Monessen to Belle Vernon. The road is privately owned by the Pittsburgh Steel Company, operators of mills in Monessen and Allenport.

The extension will provide a switching line for the Pittsburgh and Lake Erie, Pennsylvania and Pittsburgh and West Virginia railroads. The main purpose of the branch will be to furnish direct interplant railway connections between the Monessen and Allenport plants.

The extension will cost approximately $1,000,000 and construction will start as soon as the commission has approved the plan. The Monongahela River will be crossed at Belle Vernon where the tracks will occupy the lower portion of the doubledeck bridge being built by the Pittsburgh and West Virginia Railroad.

"Evidence which will broaden the issues raised in the complaint."

ing of navies, with all its flow of suspicion, hate, ill will and ultimate disaster. He continued:

"It is folly to think that because w are the richest nation in the world we can outbuild all other countries. Other nations will make any sacrifice to maintain their instruments of defense against us, and we shall eventually reap in their hostility and il will the full measure of the additional burden which we may thus impose upon them."

FAIR TO PARTICIPANTS

The treaty, the President declared, is fair to the United States and to Great Britain and Japan, the other signatories.

The chief criticism of the terms, he admitted, centers around the provision which gives the United States less 8-inch-gun cruisers than the admirals of the American General Board think necessary.

"This treaty does mark an important step in disarmament and world peace. It is important for many reasons that it should be dealt with at once. The subject has been under discussion since the Genev a conference three years ago. The lines of this treaty have been known and under discussion since last summer.

"The actual document has been before the American people and before the Senate for nearly three months. It has been favorably reported by the Senate Foreign Relations Committee. Every solitary fact which affects judgment upon the treaty is known and the document itself comprises the sole obligation of the United States.

"If we fail now, the world will be plunged backward from its progress toward peace."

The Senate adjourned soon after the formality of reading the treaty was over.

ASK THOMPSON BARE COAL DEAL

sel, who is in the Uniontown Hospital for observation.

L. K. Porter, of Pittsburgh, who appeared as trustee and counsel for the estate of John Niccolls, father of the Princess of Thurn and Taxis, opposed this move and demanded Thompson's immediate commitment to prison for contempt.

It was at the suggestion of Judge Dawson that the secret conference was called for this afternoon when Thompson is expected to make disclosures of the coal deal in which he and his associates are interested.

Judge Dawson told the counsel for both sides that he had investigated the alleged coal deal and learned that Mr. Thompson was in actual negotiations with responsible parties and that there is a possibility of such a sale. The court added that if such a deal were consummated it would be tremendous benefit not only to Mr. Thompson, but to Fayette County.

PORTER SCORES DELAY

Mr. Porter in opposing a postponement, said:

"Eversince our office came into this case," every obstacle has been put in the way of preventing a collection of the debt owed the niccolls estate. First the citation was opposed then Mr. Thompson by every means at his power, evaded service. Three years have elapsed since the litigation began and it has been 18 months since the courts final decree as to the status of Mr. Thompson. If the defendant in the first place had filed a voluntary accounting, instead of resisting at every point in the case, as he did, it would have put a different aspect on the case.

"I know of no case where direct embezzlement has been committed that so much patience has been exercised with the defendant. Not a single word has been presented to me as trustee by the other side to show that they were in good faith in this proposed coal deal. I look upon it as nothing short of a phantom sale used as a pretext to keep Mr. Thompson from obeying the courts mandates."

PROTESTS 'WAR' ALONG BORDER

WASHINGTON, July 7.—(INS.)—Declaring virtual warfare exists on the Detroit River and portions of the Great Lakes, Representative Clancy (Rep.), of Michigan, complained today to the treasury and labor departments against the alleged violations of the law by federal prohibition agents and immigration inspectors.

Clancy charged that enforcement officers run unlighted, high-speed motor boats from 30 to 50 miles an hour at night on the Detroit River, in violation of navigation laws, and declared that immigration inspectors had boarded three steamers at Windsor, in an attempt to function on Canadian soil.

Friendly relations between Canada and the United States will be imperilled unless Washington officials take a hand, Clancy said, adding:

"There is virtually a state of war on the Detroit River."

PARENTS DENY PROXY WEDDING

NEW CASTLE, Pa., July 7.—Parents of Nedra Baker, 19, New York model, deny reports printed in New York papers that their daughter had been married there by proxy, January 22, to Ernest T. Sherry, Jr., nephew of the millionaire restauranteur.

Reports say Audrey Baker, 21, Nedra's sister, took out the marriage license and pronounced the marriage vows because the model hadn't time to do it for herself. Both Mr. and Mrs. Harry Baker declared Nedra had taken out her own marriage license and had signed her own name to the certificate. The father said:

"Audrey had nothing to do with the ceremony except to witness it. I have talked to both girls on the telephone and they assure me there was nothing wrong.

"I've seen the certificate. It has Nedra's handwriting on it. She writes an entirely different hand than Audrey. I've seen Audrey, too, since my youngest daughter and Sherry were married. If there had been anything strange about the marriage I am sure she would have told us about it.

"Only last week we had a letter from Nedra, telling us about herself and Ernest, her husband. They were living in an apartment in Riverside drive. From the letter we could glean no signs of trouble or worry on our daughter's part."

Both girls are graduates of New Castle High School.

According to reports from New York newspapers, parents of the bridegroom, Dr. and Mrs. Ernest T. Sherry, have engaged an attorney to start annulment proceedings.

BLAIR VICTOR IN BALLOON DERBY

Akron Entry Declared Winner in National Race; All Crews Land Safely

HOUSTON, Tex., July 7.—(AP.)—The Goodyear Zeppelin entry from Akron, O., piloted by R. J. Blair, with F. A. Trotter as aide, was indicated today as the winner of the national elimination balloon race which started here last Friday.

Blair and Trotter landed at Greensburg, Ky., approximately 850 miles from Houston, yesterday evening and outdistanced the 14 other contestants. All landed safely.

IN CLOSE RACE

The Detroit Times bag and the United Van Service entry, of Cleveland, ran a close second for second place and a chance to compete in the international event at Cleveland September 1, with the Detroit aeronauts apparently victors by a few miles.

Pilot E. J. Hill and his aide, A. C. Schlosser, landed the Detroit Times near Russellville, Ky., at 2:55 p. m. Sunday. The United Van Service balloon was brought down at Kirksmanville, Ky., Sunday afternoon.

Capt. Fred S. Wilbur, of the race committee, said that the Goodyear Zeppelin undoubtedly had covered the most distance. He calculated the distance of the Detroit Times balloon as 700 miles and that of the United Van Service as 685 miles.

Lieut. T. G. W. Settle, one of the Navy entrants and winner of last year's national race, lost out in his attempt to represent the United States again this year in the international race. He landed near Dover, Tenn., a distance of 640 miles, and was in fourth place.

The crews placing first and second in the national event qualify for the international along with Ward Van Orman, who won the international last year.

Blair fell short of the mark set last year by Lieut. Settle, who sailed from Pittsburgh, Pa., to Savage Harbor, Prince Edward Island, Canada, a distance of 952 miles.

HOW THEY FINISHED

Navy, Lieuts. W. Bushnell and J. A. Greenwald, 550 miles, Piggott, Ark.

John D., 91, Plans Golf As Birthday Treat

TARRYTOWN, N. Y., July 7.—Ninety-one years old tomorrow, John D. Rockefeller, Sr., may be pardoned if he seems a bit exuberant.

The big event of the day was to be a golf match with some of his old cronies. They will be Rockefeller's guests on his private course at Pocantico Hills.

If Rockefeller wins he may be expected to chaff them unmercifully. Rockefeller is noted for his short but accurate shooting on the golf course, and there are those who say that's his method in the business world.

When Rockefeller makes a good shot, he remarks:

"Not bad for a ninety-year-old."

Tomorrow he can advance the remark another year.

In the evening Rockefeller will have dinner with Mrs. Rockefeller Jr., Mr. and Mrs. David Milton and several of his grandchildren. Rockefeller, Jr., who is in the West, will not attend.

DISTRICT ATTORNEY BEGINS INQUIRY INTO DOG RACES

COMPLAINT PROMPTS ACTION

Officials Here in Dark On Betting; Park Will Watch Greensburg Suit

A legal battle being waged over dog racing in Westmoreland County today drew the attention of District Attorney Andrew T. Park, after he had received a complaint against the operation of a track on Freeport road above Aspinwall.

Park announced that the complaint made today was the only one to reach his office, but that he will attend a court hearing tomorrow in Greensburg as a spectator to get at first hand the outcome of the legal battle there.

GET INJUNCTION

A temporary injunction handed down by Westmoreland court has stopped state police from interfering with the operation of a dog-racing track at New Kensington. The writ was granted following action of the state troopers in attemptin' to close the track. The outcome of the case probably will guide District Attorney Park in his course in Allegheny County.

Park said that the complaint he received today was an anonymous one and that he told the complainant he would not pay any attention to it unless the person called at his office. This the complainant promised to do.

OFFICIALS IN DARK

Officials here are in the dark as to what legal means can be taken to curb the betting at the tracks. They say that the anti-betting law is circumvented by the sale of a partial interest in a dog for a nominal price to those wishing to place a bet.

FLIER WEDS FAR ABOVE AIR FIELD

Flight Base Manager and Boston Girl United in First Aerial Marriage

Pittsburgh's first aerial wedding is history—the newlyweds are on terra firma today!

Mr. and Mrs. John R. Bazley, out of the clouds literally, may still be up in the air after yesterday's unusual ceremony, but their wedding stands out as the most prominent one ever held in Pittsburgh.

MUSICAL MOTORS

With all the ceremony of an elaborate church affair, the bridal party entered a plane at Bettis Field, the idling motors providing marital music. First the minister, the Rev. Dr. James S. Jewell, executor and field secretary of the Baptist Orphanage, Mt. Lebanon; then the bridegroom and his brother, H. Wallace Bazley, best man, entered the ship.

The blushing bride, the former Helen Grace McLeod, of Boston, gowned in green chiffon and carrying a bridal bouquet of roses and lilies of the valley, followed, with a maid and a matron of honor and the bridegroom's niece as flower girl. Mrs. Halsey Bazley, sister-in-law of the bridegroom, was matron of honor and Miss Elsie Lounsburg was bridesmaid. The flower girl was little Miss Phyllis Anne Bazley.

ENTER PLANE

The bride and bridegroom met at the cabin door of the huge transport plane, the aerial guests following close behind and taking their places in the biplane as Capt. Hal Bazley, the bridegroom's brother, climbed into the control room as co-pilot with Gilbert Waller of New York.

The ship, loaded with 21 members of the bridal party and three newspapermen, soared into the skies, climbing rapidly to an altitude of more than 3,000 feet before the ceremony got under way.

After the ship had leveled out just under a heavy ceiling of dark clouds, the motors were throttled down and Dr. Jewell, standing in the aisle, intoned the Baptist double ring marriage ceremony.

SHOWERED WITH RICE

Bride and bridegroom met in a long embrace. The ship's nose was turned back towards the field in a graceful downward swoop.

Mechanics and ground crews met the newlyweds on the ground with a tractor, escorting them through a shower of rice to the executive offices, following which the bridal party retired to the Bazley home in Brookline for dinner and an impromptu reception.

The newlyweds plan a short trip to the East, following which they will return to McKeesport, where they will make their home. The bridegroom is operations manager of the Curtiss-Wright base here. His brother, Capt. Bazley, is base manager.

SLIPS OF PAPER MANIAC CLUE

NEW YORK, July 7.—(INS.)—A new clue which they hoped would clear New York's "3-X" killer murders, engaged police today in an examination of two slips of paper, turned over to authorities by the girl companions of the victims, who were shot to death in parked automobiles.

The slips bear the water-mark of the United States, and detectives endeavored to trace the killer through the water-mark and a red ink rubber stamp, which was used to imprint the name of Joseph Mozynsky, one of the victims, on the margin of the slips. On the lower left-hand side was stamped "3-X" and in the lower righ-hand corner "3-X-097."

The girls said the slips were handed them by the murderer after he had killed their escorts.

Meanwhile search was made in the vicinity of the scene of the murders for the killer's body. Police believed, since the man has ceased writing letters, he may have killed himself.

Burgess Grant Ritchie said the pool would be open for a few hours on Sunday afternoons to residents of the town.

The Rev. O. H. Milligan, whose congregation had protested the use of the pool on the Sabbath, refrained from commenting on the matter during his Sunday services.

Niagara Barrel Victim's 'Sacred' Turtle Lives

NIAGARA FALLS, Ont., July 7.—(AP.)—The body of George Stathakis, Buffalo Greek chef, who suffocated in a barrel in which he shot the Horseshoe Falls, was at an undertaker's today awaiting claimants.

In a sealed cask of oak re-enforced with steel, he took the plunge Saturday afternoon.

An old turtle—sacred, he called it—which he carried with him was alive. No injuries were apparent.

Coroner W. W. Thompson expressed the belief that Stathakis had lived six hours.

The journey from the Cascades, through the rapids and over the falls occupied only 10 minutes.

The barrel was not thrown clear but seemed to drop through the curtain behind the falls. There it was held for hours. When it did appear it was five hours before rivermen could catch it and tow it ashore. It weighed a ton.

Stathakis, who called himself a philosopher and wrote a treatise on "The Mysterious Veil of Humanity," took along paper and pencil to record his sensations, but did no writing in the barrel.

Girl Hanging Under Plane Sees Rescuer Killed

Miss Fahrney's parachute finally became dislodged b, her weight and she was sprawled on a field a short distance from where Schustek's body fell. Although the chute became dislodged at an altitude of 1,000 feet, it opened and Miss Fahrney alighted with minor scratches, bruises and a wrenched wrist. It was her first parachute jump.

LUZERNE FIGHT ON PINCHOT FAILING

Brown Forces Fail to Win Expected Support Among Anthracite Region Voters

Competent political observers today are speculating on the possible collapse of Francis Shunk Brown's appeal to the State Supreme Court to throw out the perforated ballots cast in Luzerne County and deprive Gifford Pinchot of the Republican nomination for governor.

Pinchot carried the state by 20,000 over Brown with the assistance of alleged irregularities in Luzerne County. If the perforated ballots were thrown out Pinchot would lose and Brown by about 6,000.

Brown argues the perforations constituted mutilation and cancelled his appeal. The Supreme Court after the Luzerne County courts upheld the ballots' validity by declaring the ballots valid.

HINGES ON EXTENT

Brown's petition's appeal is based on one district only where the box was opened and the ballots ordered to be perforated. It was said the Supreme Court would require proof of Brown's assertion through the opening of disputed boxes.

It appears therefore that Brown must obtain authority to open enough additional boxes to produce the number of perforated ballots which if thrown out would cost Pinchot the Republican nomination.

Under the law the signatures of three qualified voters must appear on the petition to open each box and that requirement is said to have apparently doomed Brown's case.

HEARING EXPEDITED

The Supreme Court originally announced a hearing on Brown's appeal would be held in Pittsburgh September 29, about three weeks after the final date on which a candidate could qualify to run at the general election under a party name that had not appeared on the primary ballots. Justice John M. Kephart indicated in Philadelphia last week that the hearing could be held late this month or early in August, contingent upon the time Brown's final papers were filed.

Taxi Driver Foils 'Ride' by Note For Help

CHICAGO, July 7.—(INS)—Because he had the presence of mind to drop a note telling of his plight, George Richardson, a taxicab driver, was alive today and free from the victim of a kidnap ride.

A holdup man who promised to bump him off after a tour of banditry commandeered Richardson's cab and forced him to drive around the Fox Lake sector holding up filling stations. Richardson hurriedly scribbled a note appealing for aid. The note was picked up by a farmer and police intercepted the taxicab and arrested John Sullivan, who is held at the jail at Waukegan.

TROOPS CALLED IN FLINT STRIKE

FLINT, Mich., July 7.—(INS)—Police and state troopers in command of strike-torn Flint, where more than 4,000 automobile factory workers are out for higher wages were supplanted by Michigan National Guardsmen today.

A company of soldiers is under arms at the armory awaiting call in the event of trouble. Its equipment includes tear gas bombs.

Police Chief C. J. Scavarda has charge of the situation. The strikers' leader is Cecil Comstock who, according to police, has threatened to keep any employes of the Fisher Body Company from returning to work.

Despite the purported threat about 200 went back today. Factories of automobile companies have the appearance of armed camps.

BRITON'S CRASH ENDS SEA HOP

ST. JOHN'S, Newfoundland, July 7.—(Universal)—Disaster ended the proposed Atlantic flight of Wing Commander Wynne-Eyton, who narrowly escaped death when his plane crashed and burst into flames on a trial course.

Wynne-Eyton took off for Harbor Grace, where the oceanic flight was to start. As it left the ground, the propeller faltered and at 25 feet the engine went dead and the plane dived to earth.

Flames destroyed it but spectators dragged the pilot from the wreckage. He was taken to a hospital, slightly injured.

$3,000,000 SAIL RACES START

NEWPORT, R. I., July 7.—(INS)—The battle of the billions—costliest sporting event ever held anywhere in the world—got under way here today when the four great sloops built to defend the America's Cup began the first of their series of elimination trials. The elimination process is to be staged in two dramatic acts.

The series starting today on Block Island Sound marks the first act. When it is completed, approximately a week hence, two of the four candidates will have been eliminated, and a little more than $3,000,000 will have been tossed into the depths of the Atlantic.

The second act of the bitter elimination process will be held here in August and the starters will be the two survivors of the four-cornered struggle that begins today. When that second act is completed the lone survivor will be the ship that will meet Sir Thomas Lipton's fifth Shamrock for the America's Cup.

VOLPE DENIES VOTE CHARGES

James Volpe, reputed political boss of Wilmerding, was the principal witness today at the resumption of the Wilmerding election contest hearing before former Judge Thomas J. Prather, of Crawford County, special master.

Volpe denied that he had entered the polling place of the Sixth precinct and ordered the election board to permit persons to vote without showing naturalization papers if they made a verbal declaration. George Monroe, an anti-Volpe witness had testified at a previous hearing that Volpe had given such orders.

Other witnesses for the Volpe faction today denied they had voted on fraudulent tax receipts.

11 Deaths Added To Holiday Toll

NEW YORK, July 7.—(INS)—Two million people who fled the city's heat over the three-day week-end all tried to crowd back into New York at once, with the result that today three had been killed and 16 injured in traffic mishaps.

Sunday took an additional toll of eight dead and more than 50 injured in drownings, a motor boat fire and auto accidents.

ATLANTIC CITY GREETS ELKS

ATLANTIC CITY, N. J., July 7.—(Universal)—The vanguard of 50,000 members who will represent the 800,000 enrolled in the Benevolent and Protective Order of Elks arrived here early today for the sixty-sixth annual convention of the lodge.

Business sessions will start this evening and continue through Thursday morning. The convention will end Thursday afternoon, with a parade of all delegates.

Col. Walter P. Andrews, of Atlanta, Ga., grand exalted ruler, and Lawrence H. Rupp, of Allentown, Pa., who is slated to succeed him, were among the earliest arrivals yesterday.

While most of the 50,000 expected will not arrive until late today, representatives of more than 500 lodges were registered last night.

Among these were members of Brooklyn Lodge No. 22, whose enrollment of 7,000 is the largest in the order, and representatives of the mother lodge, New York No. 1.

COUPLE FOUND SLAIN IN AUTO

CINCINNATI, O., July 7.—(AP)—The bodies of James Bailey, 23, and Mrs. Verdova Herbert, 38, both of New Richmond, a village near here, were found in an automobile on a lonely road.

Mrs. Herbert, the mother of two children, was slumped in the rear seat with a bullet in her neck. Bailey was huddled against the other side of the machine with a bullet wound in his head. A revolver was found on the floor near his body.

Dr. Joseph Curtis, coroner of Clermont county, said Bailey apparently shot the woman and then himself.

Mrs. Herbert has been separated from her husband several years, officials learned.

Girl, 13, Forgotten, Cremated; 14 Saved

DEVON, Pa., July 7.—(AP)—Overlooked by rescuers, a girl of 13 was burned to death in a fire which destroyed the three-story frame home of Massino Marcone, where she was visiting. She was Louise De Leonardo, Wilmington, Del.

Nine other children had been assisted from the blazing building and five men and women also escaped.

Safe Broadcasting Asked in Prayers

NEW YORK, July 7.—(AP)—Prayers for "protection against dangerous broadcasting" are being offered by 36,000,000 Catholics throughout the world this month under instructions from Pope Pius XI.

The prayer is the monthly intention set by the Pope for the members of the Apostleship of Prayer, which numbers 6,000,000 in the United States.

Fugitive Scranton Banker Arrested

HARRISBURG, July 7.—(AP)—Arrest of Leo A. Haggerty, formerly vice president of the Dollar State Bank and Trust Company, Scranton, on charges of embezzling the bank's accounts, was announced today by the state banking department.

Haggerty, according to the department, has been a fugitive since the shortage was discovered last fall. The loss has been fixed at $300,000.

$75,000 Shipment Of Liquor Seized

CHICAGO, July 7.—(INS)—Special prohibition agents today seized a consignment of fine liquors, valued at approximately $75,000, in the Pennsylvania Railroad yards here.

More than 300 cases of bonded whisky, imported gin and liquors were confiscated. The liquor is said to have been smuggled into the United States near Boston and eastern dry agents tipped off the Chicago office.

Dormont Rotary Closes Activities

The Dormont Rotary Club has terminated its summer activities with the meeting held in the Dormont Methodist Church. Arrangements have been completed for the annual outing to be held at Maple View Park Wednesday. The trip to the park will be made in automobiles.

Query Morrow on Saloons

NEW YORK, July 7.—(Universal)—"How can we abolish the Eighteenth Amendment without bringing back the saloon?"

This question has been put to Ambassador Dwight W. Morrow in a letter signed by a number of Massachusetts women, most of whom are active in prohibition organizations. The letter reads in part:

"We note with alarm your program calling for repeal of the Eighteenth Amendment and declaring the liquor problem should be given back to the states, each to choose its own method. You add that the saloon must never return. If we restore the very conditions that begot the saloon, how can we expect that those conditions will not again generate the saloon or its equivalent?"

Signers include Mrs. Henry W. Peabody, president of the Women's National Committee for Law Enforcement; Mrs. William J. Tilton, president of the Unitarian Temperance Society, and Mrs. Adelaide Moors Brown, chairman of the Law Enforcement League.

LOYAL OFFICIAL FIRED BY U. S. RAKES DRYS

Bribery, Graft Rampant in Washington State, Man Ousted as Marshal Says

Universal Service.

SEATTLE, Wash., July 7.—Forced out of the federal service after eight years as United States marshal for Western Washington, E. B. Benn has broken his silence to deliver a scathing castigation of prohibition administration, as he had seen it.

Perjury, brutality, connivance with criminals, bribery and graft have marked prohibition enforcement, the veteran official declared.

For more than five years, Benn asserted, he attempted through official channels to bring about a housecleaning, to be blocked at turn after turn. Recently a United States grand jury indicted a number of officials, whose cases are now pending. During the Department of Justice investigation and the grand jury session Benn's own term expired and Senator Wesley L. Jones recommended the appointment of Charles E. Allen to the marshalship. Allen was subsequently appointed and confirmed by the Senate after some delay, taking office July 1.

"PROFESSIONAL DRYS"

Benn did not refer directly to the pending case, but said professional prohibitionists, working with Federal prohibition agents—apparently control Federal appointments in this state, and had shown sufficient political influence to block previous demands for reform of abuse which he had reported. He added:

"The interests of professional bootleggers and professional prohibitionists are identical in maintaining prohibiton enforcement as is.

"If official action fails to remedy present conditions there is only one remedy, and that is action by the people themselves, to secure honest enforcement of the law.

"By honest enforcement I mean enforcement free from graft, impartially carried out against all violators, with a sincere effort to check the flow of liquor at its source, instead of attempting to make a record of a large number of cases against the small retailer while the rum runner and wholesaler go undisturbed."

TELLS OF GRAFT

Benn charged that prohibition agents had been seen unloading liquor cargoes and that he had in his possession canceled checks showing prohibition agents paying for boat repairs and crews' wages for rum-running craft.

One customs agent who seized a carload of liquor was transferred to France, blocking an investigation at the time, he charged.

A prohibition agent suspended after one official investigation was later given letters of indorsement by government officials and officers of the Anti-Saloon League and W. C. T. U., Benn asserted, and, armed with these, was able to get a commission as deputy sheriff in a border county and continue rum-running operations.

TURKEY CLOSES IN ON KURDS

ISTANBUL, Turkey, July 7.—(AP.)—Official announcements indicated that the Turkish government is closing in on the insurgent Kurds on Mt. Ararat and that the rebel tribes face extermination.

Bombed by Turkish planes, hemmed in by the reinforced Nationalist army, the tribesmen, said a dispatch from Angora, are finding escape toward Persia impossible. If the government's campaign is successful, it will break the power of the fierce Dueliil and Haydaranli tribes. The latter numbers about 5,000, and for centuries has maintained its stronghold on Mt. Ararat, descending the slopes each spring to pillage the valley villages.

The Turkish press blames the present trouble on the Turkish Sultan Abdul Hamid, who died in 1918 after being deposed. The newspapers say he gave unlimited power to the tribal leaders and sheiks, many of whom were of the fanatical Dervish orders. The fact that the Kurdish tribes recognized no other authority than that of these leaders is considered responsible for the present uprising.

Bond Jumping Bank Robber Recaptured

BUCYRUS, O., July 7.—(AP.)—Wilbur Hand, long sought Ohio bank robber under arrest in Chicago, was convicted of robbing the Commercial Savings Bank at Galion on June 29, 1927. He disappeared while at liberty under $25,000 bond pending an appeal to the State Supreme Court.

Approximately $175,000 was taken in the robbery. Harry Zilm, convicted as one of Hand's accomplices, is serving a term in Ohio Penitentiary.

22-Months-Old Baby Drowned in Canal

READING, Pa., July 7.—(AP.)—Falling from a boat into the Schuylkill canal, directly in front of his parents' home in Birdsboro, Patsy Cuccaro, 22-months-old son of Mr. and Mrs. Louis Cuccaro, was drowned. No one saw the child enter the boat and fall into the canal, but playmates heard him scream when he fell into the water. The body was recovered in five minutes, but life was extinct.

FIGHT AGAINST RAIL RATES TO OPEN

Iron and Steel Men Meet Tomorrow to Lay Plans For Commission Hearing

Sixty representatives of large iron and steel producing companies of this district will meet in the Chamber of Commerce auditorium tomorrow afternoon at 2 o'clock, to make final plans for joining in the fight against the recent increase in short haul railroad rates on iron and steel.

The following morning the Public Service Commission will open hearings in the same auditorium on the short haul rates.

EXPERTS TO BE CALLED

The pair intends to call 15 traffic experts with Donald O. Moore, traffic manager of the chamber, as chairman, to lay before the commission the objections local shippers have to the new scale which took effect May 20. Testimony will be given with the aim of showing the scale as unfair and costly to Pittsburgh shippers and that it jeopardizes the industrial prestige of the district.

The new short haul rates effective under an order from the Interstate Commerce Commission have been suspended in the Chicago-Gary district by the Illinois and Indiana state commissions. The Pennsylvania commission lacks the power to suspend the rates until after hearings.

SEES INCREASED BILL

Chairman Moore estimates that the Pittsburgh district freight bill will be increased $2,000,000 a year if the higher rates on iron and steel are not nullified.

He stated that he expected the railroads serving the Pittsburgh district would appear in opposition to the shippers' request for suspension of the rates.

CRAZED, CHASES WIFE WITH AX

Crazed with moonshine whisky, George Koval, 42, battered down two doors in his home, 407 Third avenue, Homestead, today and had his wife Mary cornered with an ax in an upstairs bedroom when police arrived they reported.

The officers overpowered Koval and lodged him in the police station, charged with being a suspicious person.

Neighbors told police, they said, that Koval chased his wife from home with a upraised ax. She ran back into the kitchen and locked the door. He hacked his way through and pursued her to a second-floor room, according to police, where he battered down a second door, when neighbors brought aid.

FALCON HOME GIVEN CITY

TOLEDO, O., July 7.—(AP)—Pittsburgh was selected as the location for the new $250,000 national home of the Polish Falcons Alliance of America late last night, by delegates to the annual convention here.

Three cities were after the home, Chicago withdrawing from the race and Pittsburgh winning over Detroit for the national headquarters.

The delegates also decided to help Polish army veterans of the World War and a bureau will be placed in charge of this work.

The convention will close today.

have fewer other forms of excitement.

BRITAIN'S air heroine, until last week was Amy Johnson, 23, who flew alone in a small Moth Gipsy plane from London to Australia. This week all Britain is cheering Winifred Browne. She beat all the men, including the Schneider stars, Britain's greatest aces, in a 750-mile flight around Britain, and won the King's Cup. No woman had ever done that.

Miss Browne, who is 26 years old, beat 87 other fliers.

FRANCE OWNS two tiny islands, homes of hardy fishermen, St. Pierre and Miquelon, off the Newfoundland coast, and those islands worry our so-called dry nation.

Canada cut down on whisky shipments recently by request, and immediately the little French islands began receiving and shipping to us 25,000 cases of whisky per week.

FRANCE PROMISES to see what she can do about it. Perhaps the best reply to our tariff, if they really want revenge, would be to flood us with whisky and brandy.

France might well reply to our official protest:

"If you cannot keep your people from whisky drinking, how do you expect me to do it?"

UNCLE SAM, with his drink, is like Frost's farmer that yoked himself up with a bull calf and went galloping down hill shouting:

"Stop us, somebody, darn our fool souls."

BANK SEARCHES FOR $25,000

Search continued today for the package of $25,000 missing from the reserve funds of the Washington Trust Company.

The money was in one of five packages totaling $225,000. Four contained $50,000 each. Two men had access to the strong box in the bank at Fifth avenue and Washington street, but neither can explain how the package disappeared.

It was reported missing Thursday. A thorough search was made late into the night. Every nook and corner of the vault was explored.

President W. C. McEldowney of the bank says the loss is fully covered by insurance. The American Surety Company is guarantor of a $250,000 reserve fund. Mr. McEldowney declares an audit has shown there was no manipulation of the bank's books.

Despondent Man Shoots Himself

With a bullet wound in the head, which police say was self inflicted, Dominick DeFelice, 40, of 9 Boundary street, was in a critical condition in the Homeopathe Hospital today. Members of the family found DeFelice unconscious on the floor of his bedroom late last night. Police say that when they questioned him he said he was "tired of life."

Recalled Here for Injury Ending Football Days; Held Heart Attack Victim

unconscious for 24 hours in Mercy Hospital, Pittsburgh. A blood clot settled at the base of his brain. He was moved to New York where an operation was successful, but his recovery was slow. This injury dashed hopes that Lassman would follow a ring career. He was the intercollegiate heavyweight boxing champion and his style and heavy punch had led many to believe he would take up fighting professionally.

HAD LEFT BOYS' CAMP

Lassman had put out from a boys' camp. Later the canoe was observed floating without an occupant. Grappling irons and drag nets were put out and shortly before dawn today the body was brought to the surface.

Lassman, whose mother lives in Boston, had been here assisting a counsellor at a boys' camp. He went on the lake in the canoe alone. The water was calm and this led to the belief that the loss of Lassman from the canoe was the result of a heart stroke.

Lassman was an excellent swimmer. Last winter he gained country-wide fame by the gallant rescue of a Detroit girl from the surf at Miami, Fla.

CAREER ENDED HERE

Al Lassman, giant football tackle and college heavyweight boxer of New York University, came to the end of his athletic career in Pittsburgh.

Leading the New York University eleven, of which he was captain, against Carnegie Tech in a game that virtually decided the Eastern championship at Forbes Field the Saturday before Thanksgiving Day, 1928, he collapsed from an injury late in the game and was rushed to Mercy Hospital, where he lay in a semi-conscious state for days before he could be removed to New York.

Mystery surrounded the nature of Lassman's injuries. Alarming reports were discounted by both the attending physicians and the New York University authorities, but it finally was established that he was suffering from paralysis on his left side due to a brain clot. An operation to remove this condition was performed in New York, and the player went to Florida to recuperate.

REPORTED RECOVERING

Latest reports up to the time of his death were that he had recovered fairly well, but had been forced to forego his ambition to enter the ring as a professional.

No satisfactory explanation of how Lassman received his injury in the game here ever has been advanced. Players on both teams said he suddenly collapsed without any visible cause. It is believed he was injured in a scrimmage several plays before he finally sank to the ground.

WORLD BISHOPS OPEN LAMBETH CONFERENCE

Marriage and Sex, Peace And War Among Topics Angelican Church Debates

By J. K. SMITH.
International News Service.

LONDON, July 7.—One of the world's greatest ecclesiastical meetings got under way here today with opening of the Lambeth conference of Anglican bishops with 350 delegates, including 55 from the United States, in attendance.

For the next month they will discuss marriage, sex, race education, governments, peace and war.

The first sitting of the conference was held today at Lambeth Palace, the famous residence of the Bishop of London. The conference was actually opened on Saturday at Canterbury Cathedral, when the Bishop of Canterbury addressed the gathering, but the real work of the conference did not begin until today.

BASIS ON FAITH

The main subject on the agenda is "The Faith and Witness of the Church in This Generation," with special reference to the aforementioned topics.

These topics, according to the Archbishop of York, include questions to which answers of some kind must be made, and questions that will be fraught with consequences of the highest importance to the whole life of "our communion and all Christendom."

When reports of the various topics have been drawn up and approved by the conference, they will be published as the message of Lambeth to the Anglican Communion for 1930.

TEN YEARS APART

This meeting of Anglican bishops is only held about once in 10 years, the last being held in 1920.

When the conference was first established, in 1867, only 76 bishops attended. In 1878 there were 100, in 1888, 154, in 1897, 194, in 1908, 242, and in 1920, 252.

Among the interesting personalities who are attending this year are the bishops of Lebombo, Southern Rhodesia, Dornakal and Melanesia. The first has a diocese of 50,000 square miles with a population of 1,215,000 Africans and 10,000 Europeans. The bishopric of Southern Rhodesia has an Episcopal area of 200,000 square miles.

Bishop Vedanayakam Asariah, of Dornakal, India, has the dominions of the Nizam of Hyderabad as his diocese, while the bishop of Melanesia rules spiritually the Solomon Islands.

Funeral Tuesday For Drowned Pair

Double funeral services are to be held tomorrow afternoon for Paul Thalman, 44, and his wife, Mrs. Violet Thalman, 36, of Curtisville, who were drowned in the Allegheny River at Freeport Saturday.

Services are to be held at 2:30 p. m. from the home of Mrs. Thalman's mother, Mrs. Daniel Burns, of Freeport. A daughter, Zeldamae, 11, witnessed the tragedy. Two other children, Alice, 13, and Paul, Jr., 16, were at their grandmother's home at the time.

Daughter of Poet Weds Chicago Man

KEOKUK, Ia., July 7.—(INS.)—Miss Marcia Masters, daughter of Edgar Lee Masters, the poet, was honeymooning today following her marriage here yesterday to Malcolm A. Jennings. Both the bride and groom are prominent in Chicago's younger social set.

Miss Masters won fame at the age of 10 by writing a book. Since then she has written considerable poetry.

PRINCE OF WALES BROADCASTS TODAY—NEWS OF THE RADIO WORLD

By DARRELL V. MARTIN
Radio Editor.

THE RADIO EVENING offers many pleasant surprises. Dave Bagdad and the "Thousand and One Nights" will be recalled in the presentation of Rimsky Korsakoff's "Scheherazade" over WCAE at 9:30. With Don Voorhees Orchestra plays the music of the fair Sultana's symphonic [illegible] a narrative with [illegible] picture [illegible] of the fickle Sultan Schahriar who has been sworn to put to death one of his wives after the first night. The Sultana Scheherazade so aroused her husband's curiosity by telling [illegible] her execution night to night until he finally abandoned his resolve. The four most popular of these tales are in the Russian composer's musical picture.

"From the Land of Sky-Blue Water," the beautiful Indian melody that called Charles Wakefield Cadman from his position of music critic on the Pittsburgh Dispatch to a place of prominence in the music world, will be played as the finale of Plane of Dreams on WCAE at 8. Cadman's composition had been rejected by seven publishers up to the time he met Lillian Nordica in this city during one of her concerts. She was so entranced with the Indian song that she put it on her program. It was an immediate hit. Cadman now is composing music for talkies in Hollywood.

Two new features will be Phil Cook on KDKA at 7:30 and Burbig's Syncopated History, WJAS at 8, which, of course, up to Burbig standard, will be worth hearing.

Three broadcasts will bring prominent personalities to the audience—the Prince of Wales on KDKA and WCAE at 4:25; Mrs. Thomas A. Edison on KDKA at [illegible] and the Elks Memorial on WJAS at 10:15.

SANCTUM

Jesse Crawford, "Poet of the Organ," for CBS who dedicated T. A. McGinley's organ in Newark yesterday, is a princely fellow. The organist is both his work and his hobby, although golf has some attraction. Jesse just about lives at a private office in the Paramount Building, New York, where an alarm clock stands him in good stead when he falls asleep occasionally while working at night. There's an organ, a small piano, a phonograph, a radio and a large closet containing 23 suits and 16 hats.

FRIDAY JULY 11

ADDING to Milady's beauty has become one of the nation's major industries. Today there are salons and parlors where expert hands tend to the setting of Madame's coiffure, where agile fingers knead Madame's face in an invigorating massage, where scientific preparations renew the beauty of the hungry skin. It is all-important that you seek out the more reliable of these shops. That you entrust your greatest asset—beauty—to experienced hands. Thus, we suggest that you patronize those establishments who advertise in the Sun-Telegraph. Their reputation is solid. They are the masters of their profession. So that you may easily use their messages as a guide, we have grouped them every Sunday in the Society Section of the Sun-Telegraph. In these masseurs, barbers and beauticians you may place the utmost confidence. They are Sun-Telegraph advertisers, and are endorsed by the Sun-Telegraph.

COMMENT ABOUT EVENTS IN HOLLYWOOD AND BROADWAY LIFE

Jackie Coogan to Return To Screen in Part From Mark Twain

BY HARRISON CARROLL

HOLLYWOOD, July 7.

It isn't [illegible] that a child performer inspires me to adjectives, but Little Mitzi Green is an exception.

This diminutive youngster was one of the highlights in Paramount on Parade, in Honey, and in several other pictures. And now she has the lead in Becky Thatcher.

What memories the name Becky Thatcher evokes! She was Tom Sawyer's sweetheart, you remember, and her heart, in fact Mark Twain wrote of her as [illegible] trusted to [illegible] lists among [illegible] ments the [illegible] Johnson's [illegible]

Jackie Coogan

Little Mitzi, to return [illegible] Becky, was born stage [illegible] is the daughter of Joe Kelso and Rose Green, [illegible] and has herself played many engagements in the two-a-day. It was while she was doing her clever impersonations at the Orpheum that the movie producers saw and signed her. Now she's under long term contract to Paramount.

TO THE LADIES

The skeptics who doubt the artistic hobbies of film stars can take my word for it that Joan Crawford designed all the costumes worn by the Albertina Rasch Ballet Girls in Our Blushing Brides, the latest of the "Our Dancing Daughters" and "Our Modern Maidens" series. Joan puts her talent to use at home too. She and Douglas Fairbanks have a budget that other young married folks and live adhere to it strictly. One of Joan's economies is designing her own clothes. She has them made by a dressmaker, and at a surprisingly small expense. I have her assurance that the complete cost of her latest was $10.31. When she finishes a dress she has it made several more combinations. Sorry, but I can't give you the name of the dressmaker.

ALL RIGHT NOW

After several writers had failed to make an adaptation of "The Command to Love" that would get by the Hays office, Sidney Howard was engaged by Carl Laemmle, Jr., and did it [illegible] days. He is a [illegible] from Broadway doing the writing of "The Last Stage" and other plays. The new version of "The Command to Love" will be called "Her Bounded Highness." Nothing much about that is there?

CHALLENGE HURLED

A Hollywood lady has just challenged the following foreigners to ping pong:

"Regarding your statement about my losing at ping pong I resent it. I can smile at my losses in the stock market but when one makes light of my prowess as a ping pong player that's when my Irish comes to the front. Mrs. B. P. Schulberg, wife of head of Paramount Studio, Hollywood, will tell you that last Sunday, without any training whatsoever, I beat her two sets, six naught and six one. Until then she had reigned as queen ping pong player of Malibu and now she ain't gonna reign no more. Yours for bigger and better ping pong with or without whoopee."

Invention Turns 'Talkies' Into 'Smellies'

ROME, July 7.—(Universal)—Movies have become "talkies" now it seems they are about to be "smellies." A recent invention of a war mutilated soldier, Lieut. Pace, presages the coming of what we can term "odor-ies."

With Pace's invention, the passing of a train in a film will be accompanied, not only by the sight of the engine, the sound of its whistle but even the characteristic odor of steam and smoke.

Movie actresses will then be forced to look carefully to their choice of perfumes. Audiences will be hypercritical of the scents chosen and maybe prone to criticise directors with their noses.

On The Inside

Betty Compson has the heroine role in "Inside the Lines," new talkie opening today in the Sheridan Square.

STORE GIRLS, MUSIC IN NEW TALKIE IN HARRIS

"Not Damaged" is the new photoplay on the Harris talk screen. It is all about two department store girls. Lois Moran, Walter Byron, Inez Courtney and Robert Ames are prominent in the cast.

The picture manages to get in a couple of songs and one of those spectacle production numbers. To do this the movie-makers have the store employes give a show and dance.

One thing the film does do. It upsets the old theory that every poor but honest working boy is handsome and that the possessor of wealth and culture is a villain. That used to be the old movie order of things, you know.

And the big happy angle comes just where it should, at the finale. Victor Graff presides over the stage show. He also presents several song numbers. He is assisted by the Ralph Harrison RKOliants.

Things I Never Knew Till Now

That it takes longer for a person's voice to travel the few inches to the microphone than it does to travel all the way 'round the world—because after it is broadcast it is almost as swift as light.

That Childs in the Savoy-Plaza has no toothpicks.

That smoking by the girls is permitted in the class rooms at Columbia before the lesson begins.

That there are pieces of real estate a stone's throw from Times Square which have not increased a dollar in value in the past 50 yrs.

That the fastest train to Chicago isn't the 20th Century or the Broadway Limited. It is the 16-hour train that goes straight thru to Chicago daily with a load of fresh fish.

That by eating raw carrots you will whiten your teeth.

That telephone operators in Jerusalem are supposed to speak 11 languages before they can get the job.

That there is a way you may listen in on telephone conversations without making that 'clicking' sound and arousing suspicion.

That the new Wellington Hotel in New York however has the new type of phone switchboard which makes it impossible to listen in on conversations accidentally or on purpose. For if you are an operator and you try to—you immediately cut off both parties.

That Paul Revere was but one of a party who rode that night, and that the horse Paul rode was not white.

That lightning often strikes twice in the same place.

That Nancy Carroll has tried to see a movie in New York for three weeks but cannot get anyone to take her.

That among those now receiving pensions from the Federal government are several widows of veterans of the War of 1812. Ironies? Well how about old veterans who married young gels, you dope?

That there is a mountain range in Alaska known as the Crazy Mts.

That old newspapers are more effective than camphor for discouraging moths from clothing. Moths detest the smell of printer's ink.

That on the Charles Bridge, in Prague, stands the only crucifix in the world erected by Hebrew subscriptions. It was put there at the command of the Hapsburgs and has only Hebrew inscriptions.

That they are now coloring sugar—a novelty loaf of sugar being flavored and tinted lemon, orange and lime.

That Southern California practically has no twilight, for when the sun sets out there it does so quickly just like this.

That the story of "Robinson Crusoe" take it from G. W. Stimpson is based to a slight extent on the adventures of Alexander Selkirk, who wasn't shipwrecked but left on the island of Juan Fernandez by Capt. Stradling in 1704. He left the island four years later.

That there is a notice on the label of "Moxie" stating: "This drink is not to be used or sold in the New England States."

That the town of Burke, Idaho, has one street—a mile long—and that it is paved with silver lead ore.

That no hunter has ever found an elephant's carcass and that it is not known how elephants dispose of their dead.

That there once was a statute in New York barring a litigant from having more than two attorneys. The reason being that there were only 41 lawyers in New York at the time (1695).

That there are mechanical clocks which do not vary a second in 20 years. And that they are more accurate in measuring time than any observations of heavenly bodies.

That the borough tax assessor of Waynesburg, Pa., is named Andy Amos.

That the naked eye cannot see the color of grass at night.

That the spire of the Chrysler Building is covered with stainless steel, which occasionally condenses fog to cause rain to fall on the street below, although the day be comparatively clear.

That black horses suffer from the heat more than white ones.

That Rudy Vallee ankled along Brighton Beach the other afternoon while the elephants from Luna Park were taking a dip in the ocean at Coney Island. The elephants, however, drew the largest audience. Am I too loud?

That if you break a street car window in some European cities you have to pay the cost of a new one.

That it was Catherine de Medici who best defined woman's charm: "Clear eyes, Sweet breath and beautiful hands, for the hands are the eyes of the night"—which hasn't been swiped for a "popular" song, yet.

Wallace Beery appears in a prominent role in "The Big House," drama of prison life, which opens in the Penn Friday.

AIDS LEPERS 44 YEARS, BLINDED

HONOLULU, July 7.—(AP)—Ira Dutton, 67, bearing the ecclesiastical name of Brother Joseph and known as the Samaritan of Molokai, rests here at St. Francis Hospital, feeble, broken man.

In 1886 a comparatively young man, Brother Joseph went to the leper village of Kalawao, on Molokai Island. He labored among the colony's inmates for 44 years and surrendered his cloistered life only when health board officials obtained his promise to come to Honolulu for medical attention.

Why he chose the secluded colony has never been learned. Brother Joseph soon will undergo an operation on his eyes. A year ago he had cataracts removed on the island, but conditions here are more favorable for medical treatment.

He arrived from Molokai by steamer so weak he was carried from the boat to an automobile. His failing eyesight prevented him from seeing the city which he last saw 44 years ago.

TRAMPLING ART FOR PROFITS

FOR all its virtues, modern industrialism can run amuck under the spur of greed for profits. Witness, the ruin threatening the Art of Music.

300 musicians in Hollywood supply all the "music" offered in thousands of theatres. Can such a tiny reservoir of talent nurture artistic progress?

The true function of the machine is to increase the value of the product fed into it—not to debase it. Therefore mechanical music, as a substitute for Living Music, is a spurious form of progress—Like a loom converting good wool into shoddy.

The grind organ, however operated, is a grind organ still. For music is an emotional art, a form of social intercourse, and hence dependent upon human contact.

Who profits by the elimination of genuine music from the theatre? Not the music-loving public!

If you agree that theatre patrons are entitled to real music—in addition to talking and sound motion pictures, for the price they pay—HELP SAVE THE ART FROM RUIN. Enroll with millions of others in the Music Defense League. When the public's voice is raised its will must be served!

PARTIN TAKEN TO ARKANSAS

LITTLE ROCK, Ark., July 7.—(AP)—George H. Partin, Memphis sportsman, whose return to Little Rock to face charges of attempted bribery of a state legislator in 1929 has been sought by Arkansas authorities for months, arrived from Pittsburgh in custody of Deputy Sheriff W. H. Harris.

Partin immediately signed a $4,000 bond and, after conferring with his attorney announced his departure for Memphis. Partin said he would return to Pittsburgh later to complete installation of a dog racing track there.

The charge pending against Partin was lodged against him by State Senator John M. Quarles, of Helena, who declared on the floor of the State Senate he had been offered $1,000 by Partin to vote for a bill to legalize pari-mutuel betting. The bill was passed by the 1929 Legislature but was subsequently vetoed by the Governor. Partin said on arrival here:

"I never met Senator Quarles in my life. His charge is without foundation."

Young Mum on Plea To Pardon Mooney

LOS ANGELES, July 7.—(INS)—Gov. C. C. Young today remained silent over his deliberations as to whether he would pardon Tom Mooney from San Quentin Prison, where he is serving a life sentence for asserted complicity in the San Francisco Preparedness Day bombing in 1916 that cost 10 lives. His decision was expected this week.

The State Supreme Court last week recommended that Gov. Young not pardon Warren K. Billings, convicted with Mooney. Billings, a recidivist, is serving a life sentence in Folsom Penitentiary.

Largest U. S. Liner Contract Awarded

CHICAGO, July 7.—(AP)—William Allen, western traffic manager for the United States Lines, announced yesterday that contracts had been awarded for the construction of the largest liner ever built in the United States.

The vessel under contract will be 31,000 gross tonnage and will cost $21,000,000, Allen said. He added that the line planned a $90,000,000 building program for the next few years.

KIDNAPING TALE UNDER QUIZ

Police today were investigating the story of H. E. Shuttleworth, of Ivanhoe street and Allegheny avenue, that he was kidnaped and beaten by three men on the night of July 4 and robbed of $40 in cash and a watch.

His wife, who reported the robbery to North Side police, said her husband told her of joining the three men in an automobile in East Ohio street, near Heinz street. In the machine he was struck on the head with a blackjack, robbed and then thrown out on a highway six miles from Etna, he said.

TEMPLE LAUDS PEACE MOVES

WASHINGTON, July 7.—(AP)—The Hoover administration was credited by Congressman Henry W. Temple, of Washington, Pa., chairman of the House Foreign Affairs Committee, with having made more progress in 16 months toward strengthening the foundations for world peace than had been accomplished "in many years" before.

First among the steps taken, the Pennsylvanian listed the negotiation of the London treaty.

In a statement issued through the Republican National Committee, Temple enumerated also proclamation of the Kellogg-Briand treaty renouncing war as an instrument of national policy, the completion of war debt negotiations and "a general strengthening of the bonds of friendship" between the United States and Latin and South American countries.

RESTORE ORDER IN MOB DEATHS

EMELLE, Ala., July 7.—(INS)—Quiet reigned here today in the wake of the slaughter of four Negroes by a mob which formed to avenge the killing of Grover Boyd, a storekeeper, and Charlie Marrs, a farmer.

The death toll in the rioting reached six yesterday when an unidentified Negro and a Negro woman were killed by a mob of 200.

Two Negroes previously had been slain at the hands of the vengeful mob. It was first reported that several other Negroes also had become victims of the possemen, but a checkup later spiked the reports as false.

Boulder Canyon Dam Construction Begun

Married Men Who Play Around Love Only Themselves, Says Fay King

By FAY KING.

Some married men who play around pride themselves on their honor in telling a girl right at the start that they are married.

This is even more selfish than the married man who lets a girl think he is single. For in admitting at once he is married a man absolves himself from all responsibility. He warns a girl that she has everything to lose and nothing to gain.

Very few wives, if any, misunderstand their husbands.

No husband ever successfully deceived his wife, either. But wives often find it to their advantage to appear deceived.

No woman—wife or sweetheart—was ever won except by affection and romance. All he tells you he told his wife long ago.

Cheaters lose no one but themselves.

Love's Reawakening

Continuation of Love's Awakening

By ADELE GARRISON

Madge Makes Early Morning Exploration

My subconsciousness must have rebelled at my decision not to worry longer over the many conflicting duties pleasurable and otherwise which I had planned for the morrow. At any rate it made my night's sleep an uneasy nightmare in which Junior and Roderick played [illegible] at each other with revolvers in a roped-off arena in the basement while William and Henry danced in glee on the outside. Ducky and Harry Underwood were present as umpires and my mother-in-law's voice continually wailed: "It's all your fault, for thinking of such a crazy scheme."

So vivid were my dreams that when I awoke at dawn I was so fatigued and depressed that I was ready to agree with the dictum I had dreamed came from my mother-in-law's lips: But ten minutes of lying perfectly still with my eyes closed my infallible method for getting hold of myself before an arduous day brought my common sense back to me and I at least felt grateful to the nightmares for having me so early. I should have freed every minute of waking time if I carried out the strenuous program I had laid out for myself.

I dressed hastily in warm clothing and old heavy shoes and stockings and, taking a flashlight and paper and pencil, made my way noiselessly to the basement. There was no light in the unfinished space, but there were plenty of connections in the billiard room adjoining and rummaging in a work closet I found Jim's trouble light which he uses when anything goes wrong with an electrical connection. This I connected and brought into the vacant room. Then I sat down upon a upturned box and gave myself up to that most fascinating of occupations planning the fitting up of a room.

I had helped my father plan the billiard room and had been at the farmhouse while it was in process of construction, so I knew what materials had been used. Armed with this knowledge I drew plans and figured and made lists, destroying the first ones, and altering the others until finally I could see the completed room just as I wished it.

I turned at the doorway and blew a kiss to it.

"Merry Christmas," I said softly, and had barely turned back to the billiard room before the words were punctuated with a wild shriek from the kitchen.

"Oh! h-h-Help! Murder! Policemans! Qveek! Sumbody in cellar!"

With a muttered anathema at my excitable little maid, I dashed up the stairs calling at the top of my voice: "Katie! I'm down here. Nothing's the matter. Stop yelling."

But when Katie is in the throes of fright or any other emotion there is no shutting off her voice unless a gag is used. I am afraid I often have wished for the courage to clap one in her mouth, and as I reached the top of the stairs hearing her shrieks crescendoing through the house, the wish was a cosmic urge.

I sprang toward her and seizing her shoulder, shook her soundly.

"Will you stop this noise?" I said sternly. "No one is in the basement now. I went down there a little while ago. What is the matter with you? Everybody in the house will be down here. Listen. There comes somebody now."

There were indeed running feet upon the stairs, and the next instant Dicky burst into the kitchen, revolver in hand. But Katie had taken refuge in her apron—an old sanctuary of hers, and with it thrown over her head was indulging in a perfect orgy of hysterical sobs.

"You can put it up," I said wearily to Dicky, indicating his service revolver. "I am the marauder who frightened Katie. I went down in the basement early that I might make those plans we spoke of last night. When Katie came into the kitchen she heard me moving down there, decided there was a burglar in the cellar—and acted accordingly."

Dicky's face was black with anger when I had finished, but whether his ire was directed at Katie or me, or at both of us I had no opportunity to find out, for before he could speak other running feet came down the hall and the kitchen speedily filled with all the adult members of the household in [illegible]

Household Hints

Peroxide applied with cotton will bleach out elbows that have gone rusty. Follow with a five-minute massage with cold cream.

If there are gray lines mix cornmeal with a strong soap suds and apply with friction. Elbows are seldom treated kindly. If the bone is sharp and prominent the skin should be oiled every night.

After washing the hands with warm water, pure soap and a brush, take an old soft linen towel and dry the nails from the top end toward the base. The cuticle is soft then and can be loosened from the nail. If an orange stick is used to lift the cuticle send it around in tiny circles: this treatment is less likely to injure the flesh than pushing the cuticle back carelessly and roughly.

The Marry-Go-Round

By HELEN ROWLAND.

Selling Out Love

Marriage as a business proposition is about in the class with the hairpin industry and stock speculation. It is no longer a sure thing except for high-stake gamblers, gold-diggers and alimony seekers.

Once, when a girl married we said that "her fortune was made" and that meant that she would resign her job and hand it over to some girl who needed it more than she did. Now she is more likely to go in and ask for a raise.

Once if a man didn't marry it was because he couldn't afford to marry. Now, judging from the letters we receive, it is more often the girl who feels that she can't afford to marry.

"Why," they argue, "give up party dresses, important perfumes, matinees and permanent waves, in order to buy egg-beaters, waffle irons, dahlia bulbs and bassinets?"

"Why exchange the attentions of a lot of men for the inattention of just one." Why trade a fan cooled office for a hot kitchenette?"

Not even the most ardent lover deludes himself with the fiction that "two can live as cheap as one," in these gasoline days. He admits that two can live as cheap as four or five, if you will help pay the bills.

Modern marriage is an expensive affair and quite beyond the purse of the average young man at the love-age. Gas refrigerators, vacuum cleaner and automobile tires do not grow on trees. And bungalows cost as much today as grandfathers paid for a mansion.

All this has changed marriage from a necessity to a luxury, and a husband from an asset to a liability.

The girl who wants a home and a husband must make two pay envelopes grow where there used to be only one.

The hand that rocks the cradle must also drive the flivver, paint the kitchen, buy the theater tickets and help bring home the bacon. That is, if she MUST have all the things that the modern wife demands.

Getting married no longer means being supported in the style to which you would like to become accustomed. And that's THAT.

Dozens of girls write me, protesting that they cannot marry and give up the luxuries, amusements and freedom which they now enjoy, in order to live on half a man's salary.

I wonder why. I wonder what those girls buy with that salary check, one-half so precious as the thing they sell for it: love and home and companionship!

Do a few frivolous frocks, a few smart hats and a few weeks of summer holiday represent the REALITIES of life for them? It seems to me that they are selling out awfully cheap! Jack, who traded his mother's cow for a hatful of beans was a great financier beside them.

Love, work, money, fame and pleasure all have their thrills, their dull moments—and their PRICE. But there aren't enough dollars in the world to fill the void in a life empty of companionship!

How to Keep Well

By DR. ROYAL S. COPELAND

Facts About Goitre and Iodine

Goitre is a disease of the thyroid gland. Almost everybody has heard of the ductless glands, those mysterious and complex glands of the body which manufacture and utilize very important secretions for the use of the body.

DR. COPELAND

Most of the ductless glands are small but one of them, the spleen, is [illegible] larger than the others. Its function seems to be the formation of the white blood cells.

One of the other principal ductless glands is the thyroid gland. This gland is a very important and indispensable part of the body. Its two parts lie one on each side of the Adam's apple, that familiar prominence on the front of the neck. In most persons this gland is so inconspicuous that it serves merely to fill in and round out the contours of the neck.

But occasionally a person finds that the glandular tissues are growing and thickening. It may not be uniform growth but may be confined to one side of the neck. One part or lobe of the gland is involved in such a case.

Another person may find all the parts of the gland gradually but steadily growing. The organ becomes so big that it cannot be hidden by the dress.

The thyroid gland is one of the series of ductless glands. It has no duct or outlet for its secretions or juice, but the secretion is absorbed from the cells of the gland directly into the lymphatic vessels. This secretion is one of the most important of the body because of its influence on the conversion of food into animal tissues. This is the process known as metabolism.

The thyroid secretion increases oxidation. Its principal constituent is iodine. The thyroid gland takes from the blood stream the iodine removed from the food.

There is a substance called "thyroiden" present in this gland which is very necessary to the body's welfare. If there is too much of this secretion the gland swells and the body is over-supplied with iodine, and may even be poisoned by it.

The underlying cause of goitre has been traced to long mental and physical strain. It may be traced to nervous disease to appendicitis, tonsilitis, gallstones and many other diseased conditions of the body.

There is an interesting relation between iodine and the development of goitre. It is a disease common to certain sections of Switzerland as well as many parts of America.

Now there is a widespread belief that the lack of iodine in drinking water may be responsible for goitre. This seems like a direct contradiction of the Switzerland idea. Sometime the medical profession will know much more about this mysterious working of the thyroid gland.

It would seem, however, that there is importance in the theory that every child should be fed minute quantities of iodine. It should be made certain that the substance is in the system to perform its regulatory work. But in the cure of goitre of long standing I doubt if iodine is of value.

Self-medication is unwise. Any suspicion of goitre should lead to consultation with a reputable doctor. Under proper control and taken early, I have no doubt that iodine is a valuable remedy in controlling this disease.

Correct Manners

By MRS. CORNELIUS BEECKMAN

A Letter to the Future Parents-in-Law

DEAR MRS. BEECKMAN:

1—I am going about with a young man from Scotland. His parents are not in this country. I am engaged to him and would like to know if it would be proper for me to write to his parents, although I have never met them?

2—If a girl is to be married and she had a sister younger than she is who died, would she, in the announcements of the engagement, put herself as the youngest or second youngest daughter?

B.

1—Yes, indeed. Write this letter as soon as possible, as fine and forthright a letter as you can word, a letter full of warm-hearted friendliness, assuring them of your interest in them, and of your wish to be very "daughterly" to them. Tell them of the loving interpretation of them that has come to you from their devoted son, and in every way possible make them feel that you are the kind of daughter-in-law that they would wish to have, the kind of wife that they would wish their son to have. And make them and your fiance proud of your letter! Try to put yourself in their place, and write them the sort of thing that they would wish to know. Not insincere, of course, but articulate.

2—As the youngest daughter.

The Veil or the Hat for the Bride

DEAR MRS. BEECKMAN:

1—Is it proper for a bride to wear a veil or a hat at an afternoon wedding in her home?

2—What do you think of my penmanship and stationery?

S. W.

1—Either is correct—it depends on the choice of the bride, and whether she wishes to have a formal or an informal wedding.

2—Your handwriting is good, but a bit faintly written. Use heavier ink, perhaps, to give backbone to your writing.

I am not a bit enthusiastic about letter paper of this one-sheet kind. To my mind it gives an impression of a business letter. Why not get the double-sheeted kind, of the white of your present paper?

Evening Clothes

DEAR MRS. BEECKMAN:

I am invited to attend a golden wedding dinner and dance. I am anxious to know whether or not it is proper to wear a hat.

E.

An occasion of the kind that you describe is usually of the most formal kind, and one wears evening clothes without a hat. I think that you should be embarrassed if you wear informal clothes and a hat.

The Groom's Parents Are Not the Hosts

DEAR MRS. BEECKMAN:

I am to be married in a few weeks and my invitations have already been mailed. My future in-laws believe that their names should have been mentioned on the invitations. I have no father and my invitations read as follows:

Mrs. John Blank requests the pleasure of your presence at the marriage
to Mr. John Graham
on July twentieth.

We will appreciate very much hearing from you. I am almost certain that the bride's parents are the only ones to be mentioned on the printed form.

P. P.

Don't worry, dear girl. Your invitations were in the correct form. Since it is the parents of the bride who are the hosts of the occasion, it is their names, and only their names, that appear on the invitation.

The parents of the groom are the guests of honor of the occasion and their names do not appear on the invitations.

Tomorrow's Horoscope

Tuesday, July 8

A day of radical and far-reaching events is read from the governing lunar and mutual configurations. With Uranus as the leading factor there is likely to be sudden and abrupt change, removal or journey, and these while bringing much personal happiness and benefits may also assume some disagreeable angles, especially if not wisely weighed and judiciously acted upon. Domestic, social or romantic affiliations seem to be involved, lifting the affairs quite out of the ordinary or routine.

Those whose birthday it is are on the threshold of a year of adventure and radical events. There may be sudden changes or journeys, likely in connection with important developments in social, domestic or romantic circles. Although affairs generally will be lifted from the mediocre and routine grooves, bringing new plans, new friends and excellent new opportunities.

A child born on this day should be versatile, talented and accomplished mentally, artistically and socially, being well-equipped for great adventure, achievement and happiness in its outstanding career.

A Hair Dye

Sage tea is an old fashioned hair coloring agent. It works and is satisfactory if a brown-drab tone is desired, but it wears off and must be applied again. Boil one ounce of sage leaves in one quart of water, letting the quart boil down to a pint. Cool, strain and add a tablespoonful of rubbing alcohol. Apply with cotton or a small brush immediately after the shampoo, when the hair is dry. Experiment first with a single lock.

DOOMED BANDIT EXPECTS STAY

CANON CITY, Col., July 7.—(AP)—The prolonged and involved drama which opened with the Lamar bank robbery and its attendant murders, and continued through a two-year chase for the bandits and subsequent legal battles, is nearing the end for one of the principals as Ralph Pleagle, gray-haired leader of the Lamar party, today began his final week of life.

In his cell in the death house of the state penitentiary here, the doomed slayer is said to still maintain confidence of cheating the gallows upon which he is condemned to die some time during the week ending next Saturday. He is basing his hope upon the promise of life imprisonment made by state's officers when he turned state's evidence.

A remote and apparently rapidly fading hope for Pleagle lies in a reprieve from Governor W. H. Adams. Those close to the governor say the chances of the state executive issuing a reprieve are virtually negligible.

It was reported by prison authorities that Mrs. Margaret Pleagle, wife of the condemned man, will receive a $100,000 bequest after the bandit's hanging. Pleagle is said to have deposited the money in a Berlin, Germany, bank. He is also reported to have placed a large sum in trust for his mother and a brother, Walter.

South Hills Women Arrange Outing

The annual picnic of the South Hills Womans Club will be held July 17 at Carrick Park. At a recent election the following officers were named: President, Mrs. Mayme Evans; first vice president, Mrs. Elizabeth Deininger; second vice president, Mrs. Jane Moulten; recording secretary, Mrs. Josephine Preissler; corresponding secretary, Mrs. Anna Preifer; financial secretary, Mrs. Carrie Montgomery; treasurer, Mrs. Jessie Keith; pianist, Mrs. Mary Jones; custodian of the flag, Mrs. Rose Mullen.

Boy Killed by Shot Fired as Warning

COLUMBIA, S. C., July 7.—(AP.)—A youth believed by police to be Joseph Hammond Jerman, of Washington, died at a hospital here after having been shot in the head by G. H. Priester, filling station operator.

Priester told the police he was awakened at an early hour by a noise in front of his station and fired to frighten the youth when he saw him attempting to remove oil from the station storage tank.

Two 4-H Leaders Injured in Crash

BINGHAMTON, N. Y., July 7.—(AP.)—Two persons nationally prominent in 4-H, were injured in an automobile accident near here. They are Richard Goodwin, 17, of Guilford, president of the state 4-H Club Association, and Mildred Olmsted, of North Norwich.

Goodwin, driving his parents and Miss Olmsted to North Norwich, was rammed by a machine driven by William Dyer.

GERMAN HAILS U. S. AMITY

WASHINGTON, July 7.—(AP.)—The opinion that reconciliation between the American and German people after the World War has become an accomplished fact was expressed yesterday by Ambassador von Prittwitz in a radio address.

The German ambassador's message was broadcast over the Conclave of Nations series of the Columbia broadcasting system.

Prefacing his remarks with a tribute to trans-Atlantic aviators, Herr von Prittwitz said:

"If technical science and technical skill have been able to diminish the physical distance which separates Europe from America, it is perhaps still more gratifying that the forces of good will on both sides of the ocean have been able equally to reduce the mental distance created between our two peoples by the war."

Loss of Eaton Prompts Anne to Accept Ted

CHAPTER XXVII.

Anne opened the door and fell back at sight of Eaton, the estranged eyes the set mouth, the outthrust jaw.

"I asked you not to come—you shouldn't have—" she began, but he pushed past her into the living room and turned on her.

"I had to come. Look here," he began, half incoherent, "I've heard—Anne, you can't leave me. You've got to stay."

"But after what we agreed—" she said almost dizzy with his nearness.

"It doesn't matter what people say or think. You were willing to leave for my sake. Well, don't worry about that any more—I was willing to let you go for your sake. I've got over it. You must stay. That adoption—he took her into his arms, fought it completely. "I've got to have you," he told her hoarsely. "I'm mad about you. You know it, Anne. You admit you belong to me!"

He forced her chin up with his hands and bent to her mouth and kissed her fiercely.

She was an abandon she thought she must drop but for his arms about her. His arms were danger and support. So while she cried out repudiating him for both their sakes she yet clung to him with a remnant of strength. It was pain, it was agony, it was peril and madness, it was a dream come true and it was rapture to be held like that.

Eaton said huskily: "Do you care for me? You do?"

That brought her to her senses. She did care for him. Too much. If she surrendered to the demands of her own flesh and blood and his, they were lost.

She did not answer. Slowly Eaton withdrew his arms and faced her, his gray eyes dark in his white face.

"So it's true, then?"

"What is true?" she managed to ask.

The Way Out

"That you're to marry O'Hara—that man Adams told me so at the newspaper office. I didn't believe it. I couldn't. Not wholly."

For an instant she wondered if she were going mad. Adams? She put her hand to her eyes in a gesture of blindness. Jimmy must have told Adams that she was engaged as he had suggested. And Eaton had jumped at conclusions.

Well, it was a way out. She'd tell him it was so, and then he'd leave her and she need never see him again—never see him again.

"Is it true?" Eaton demanded again.

"Yes," said Anne in a small tired voice. "It's quite true."

After a long moment, he said: "Well, my mistake. I thought—It doesn't matter what I thought. I won't ask you to forgive me for what I did just now. I'm not sorry," he said and turned and walked to the door.

A moment later it shut behind him. Anne ran to it, her arms outstretched. "Only come back," she pleaded with the empty hall—"only come back. I'll do anything, give anything, be anything you want me to be—only come back!"

But nothing answered her save the echoes of her own desperate weeping.

Eaton hailed a taxicab and climbed into it wearily. He felt bruised, like a man who has taken terrific punishment. He'd gone there to tell her he didn't believe Adams' casual, world-shaking statement, to tell her he loved her, to ask him to wait until he was free, to ask her to give herself into his keeping forever—and he'd not said a word of all this because his need was so great he'd taken her in his arms and kissed her and lost himself in her imagined response. Now he was glad he had not spoken, for she was to marry O'Hara.

Eaton Gets Drunk

Later that night Eaton went out, hunted up some men and proceeded to get drunk, something he'd not done since—since the Dolly days.

The next morning he was sick with disgust at himself. He sat at the breakfast table, his head in his hands, thinking—remembering.

There was something funny about it, after all. Linda had said he'd no sense of humor—the custard-pie sort. No, Anne had said that. Well, he mustn't think of Anne. But: "Isn't it funny, Anne; after all, Linda needn't have gone to Reno for her divorce. She could have got it right here. After all these years of being cautious and not taking the fruit offered—and feeling rather smug about it—and now....."

But the thing that tortured him was the feeling, not that he had been unfaithful to Linda, who was still his wife, but that he had been unfaithful to Anne, who had never been his wife—Anne, who was to marry another man.

He wondered what Anne was thinking—if she laughed to herself at the remembrance of his madness or if she had forgotten it in O'Hara's arms.

He did not know that she was almost beyond coherent thought. He did not know that she was tasting the bitterest fruit of all, the fruit of a dead [illegible] of something once longed for, which has come too late.

But Anne believing that the parting Eaton had brought her was the half that Love's little sister knew as she had known all Hot Springs that she could not accept—wanting so much more. Yet once she had thought it enough.

Now although every fiber in her cried out for surrender on any terms she had fought her way to sanity and prided on the [illegible] as a way to escape. That he cared for her she did not believe. That he wanted her she knew, but it brought no comfort, only an added shame that his wanting should be so much less than her own.

Incites Ted

That night Ted reaching home found a scribbled message: "Call Miss Murdock at her house." It read:

Ted had been away on business for a week, sent by Sanders to talk over some copy with a Western client. It had been his first important responsibility, the affair had been concluded satisfactorily, and he was back again.

He rang Anne up. Her voice came to him: "Ted! Could you come down tonight?"

Could he!

He was there in less than an hour. Kathleen was at the theater. Anne was alone. She made a fool of him a dozen times a week, he told himself, but there was no one like her.

"I've left the office," she told him, almost immediately.

Ted's mouth fell open.

"Oh, do close your mouth," she said. "What's so remarkable about it?"

"Nothing. Only I thought you were a fixture—a little Rock of Gibraltar."

"I was tired of it," she answered lightly, "and Jim had heard of an opening with the Barrows people."

Anne!" His face was radiant. She had left Eaton. There wasn't any truth in that old gnawing anxiety of his, after all. Anne," he repeated, "don't take another job. Take me instead! Cut out the work and take a partnership job. I love you. I want you. We'll get to the top, the two of us, together."

She looked at him a moment in silence. Well, why not? There wasn't anything left for her any more. The job was done, the job that had meant so much. Eaton had gone, she'd let him believe the lie. Well, she'd make good.

Says She'll Marry Him

"Teddy," she said, "you're a dear, and I'm fond of you, but I don't love you."

It's enough to go on. You'll love me," he told her confidently. "You'll have to love me. I'll make you! You haven't had time for love, you haven't learned how," he went on, "giving every minute of your waking time to your job. Well, to the devil with the job! I'm offering you one for life."

She rose and went over to him and sat down on the arm of his chair and put her hands on his shoulder. "If I say 'yes' you'll be patient with me, and not expect too much?" she asked.

"Anne!"

He pulled her down to his lap, kissed her eyes and her mouth with a young, ardent hunger.

She liked him, she was fond of him; her senses were as young as his. She was ardent and unspoiled; she had the imagination which makes a woman that rare thing—a perfect lover. And she was tired, beaten to the ground with emotion and grief and the aching sense of loss that was irreplaceable. It was comfort, sheer physical comfort, to be in the arms that held her so closely, that loved her so eagerly, to know herself beloved and enduringly desired.

For she had been so terribly hurt.

Is it always going to be like this?" she asked herself, in a sick panic.

She opened her eyes and looked straight into Ted's. Of course it wouldn't always be like this! She'd grow to find release and comfort in Ted's caresses because they were—Ted's. Not because they were any man's kisses that she could dream of — substitutes, narcotics.

"I'll marry you," she said.

CHAPTER XVIII.

Morgan walked furiously away. This guard, Wallace, was enough to nag and egg the most resolute man on to murder. He strolled down the yard toward Butch's gang, who were all grouped about something on the wall which had aroused their interests. Morgan found that they had just captured two cockroaches and were about to race them.

Get down, you [illegible] I'm betting it's mine," Butch cried.

Two pairs of weeds on the skinny one," Morgan cut in.

Butch glared at him with a look.

Come on, cover 'em.

Wise bettin' two to one on Morgan's pipe cleaner," from Joe.

Chewing tobacco, cigarets, cigarette tobacco, papers and tailored cigarets all went into the pot. Meanwhile Butch drew a big diagonal circle on the wall with a stick. In the other hand he held his cap which covered the restless, bewildered cockroaches.

Butch peered beneath the cap and was flipping the insects when a general hubbub arose.

Take 'em! Let 'em ramble!

Go to it, Butch!

Come on, you sick spitters!

Butch raised the cap gracelessly and the two bugs were huddling close together. The large one, identified as Butch's, was peppy and active. He raised his small head, shot his feelers out experimentally in several directions and then shook his pointed face.

Look at the size of him!" cried Butch in admiration.

Speed not size wins races," said Morgan.

Yeah, well I'll take power." The brawn cockroach had already begun to crawl. The other appeared anxious to follow, but could not budge. His legs flew out at the sides and his feelers jiggled rapidly.

Race Is Fixed

Say, Morg, what's the matter with your bug?"

He's dead.

His mind ain't on his business."

Butch was shouting: "Come on, Big Boy, come on, Sugarfoot, give Morg's nag a kick in the whiskers . . . come on, cocky, old roach . . . Morg's bug is on flypaper."

The large cockroach went over the line. Several cheered weakly. Butch grinned broadly and began to take up the packages of cigarets and other smoking materials. Morgan just happened to notice, as Butch raised his head, that the killer was chewing gum. He then looked at his cockroach and saw him still at the starting point.

Morgan was no fool. He walked quietly to the wall and between his fingers he picked up his entry. Sure enough, he was stuck fast! But Morgan wanted to be sure of the culprit. He made a sortie of inspection, looking over every man, but he could find none who was chewing gum save Butch.

He walked toward Butch and their eyes met. Butch gulped once, swallowed the gum, and then grinned sheepishly. Morgan showed the cons the gum beneath the beaten roach. Butch turned angrily on the group.

Who done that?" he cried. "Who fixed this race?"

You did!" cried Morgan, a twinkle in his eye. He reached down quickly and snatched up his ten packages of cigarets and stuffed them in his blouse.

Butch Threatening

"Who—me?" Butch was offended.

Yes, you. You doped my stable." His words were met with grumblings in the circle. Several who had lost glared at Butch. The latter's rage was mounting. He swept the faces about him with a meaning look, and asked:

"Who else here thinks I pulled a phoney?"

No answer. Then he turned on Morgan.

"You do—do you?"

Morgan nodded. Butch stepped forward. Morgan, unafraid, stood in quiet defiance. His [illegible] I got a [illegible] on you, and then I throw you on your back.

What are you men doing—fighting?" asked Wallace.

No, just wrestling," from Morgan.

Wallace noticed the pile of cigarets and tobacco.

Oh-ho! Gambling?"

Oh, no, no," said Butch innocently. "I wouldn't.

Then how'd all those cigarets get there?

I took them out of my coat while I was wrestling," said Morgan.

Oh, well," and Wallace leaned over and scooped up all the cigarets and tobacco and stuffed them in his own pockets. The men began to grumble, but Wallace quelled them with a black look.

When Wallace was out of earshot Butch began cursing. He turned on Morgan.

You steamed all this up," he bellowed. "You got that nerve on us. You called me names I wouldn't take from no man, no man—but you, Morg, my old pal—thanks!"

-:- The Beauty Box -:-

By HELEN FOLLETT

The white of an egg beaten and mixed with almond meal to form a paste the consistency of whipped cream makes an excellent face pack. The egg acts as an astringent to an oily and irritated skin surface the meal imparts a delicious softness to the epidermis. Let remain on until it begins to dry and then rinse with tepid water dry and give a five-minute massage with a heavy cream. The beauty supplement comes out of the pack fresh as a daisy.

Makeup should of be a tawdry substitute for natural coloring. Painted lips and cheeks of Chinese red are being laboriously off the face of the feminine. The correct lip rouge at the present moment is an exact reproduction of the natural coloring of the lips which is a faintly bluish crimson. It can be picked out easily. Bite the lips until they are red, then select the color substitute. Paint eye shadows of mauve or orchid are chasing conventional blacks away.

Little dollies dabbling around with complexion coloring should not play pass the lipstick." You see them at it in public conveyances, the theaters in restaurants. It is a dangerous practice. Like borrowing a toothbrush. Of toilet articles neither borrower nor a lender be. Powder puffs, combs, brushes, lipsticks can easily enough become tenements for disease germs. It isn't safe even to dip into somebody else's cold cream jar.

The short girl who is still growing should do a lot of stretching. She should imitate the noble house dog who never arises from sleep without rousing his muscles with a good stretch. Animals follow nature's health laws. They seldom over eat. They rest when they are tired. They keep their muscles flexible and in order. Humans make laws of their own which aren't so good.

Blackheads are deposits of sebaceous oil and dust that have clogged the pores. When they break the walls of a pore infection sets up and a pimple results. Soap and warm water should be used freely and large blackheads pressed out with a comedone extractor after which the skin surface must be bathed with a warm saturate solution of boric acid.

Figuring up health-wealth should be every woman's business. To feel tired restless and headachy is to be under standard. Health of body and mind are the foundations upon which the beauty temple is built. A bad digestion destroys good looks and a bad temper obliterates them completely. No ill-natured woman is pretty. The gal who chases the rainbow of beauty should be on her toes, fit as a fiddle up and at 'em.

When brushing the teeth do not overlook the inner surfaces. They should be brushed from the gums downward. An excess of starches and sweets is injurious to pearly grinders. Starches and sweets use up alkaline secretions necessary for the health of the teeth. Saliva is necessary not only for the digestion of food but for the strength of pretty fangs.

Deep scars can be removed only by the surgeon's knife. Light scars of recent appendicitis should be stimulated every night with ointment of zinc oxide. Smallpox pittings are successfully treated by plastic surgery. Only a reliable medical man should do the work.

BOY EXPLORERS OFF TO ARCTIC

LONDON, July 7.—(AP.)—Fifteen youthful explorers, whose average age is only 23 years, sailed from London aboard the exploration ship Quest for a year's exploration of the Arctic regions. Their work will be done on the ice-covered stretches of Greenland and Iceland.

The purpose of the voyage, under the auspices of the Royal Geographical Society, is to obtain information with a view to establishing an air route from England to America across the Arctic regions, with only 300 miles over the sea.

H. G. Watkins, 23-year-old explorer, is leader of the expedition. His 14 companions are all about the same age, and each is a specialist.

The hold of the Quest was packed with a year's food supply, including six tons of food for the dogs. Two airplanes, two speedboats, sledges and several delicate meteorological instruments furnished by the government were included in the equipment.

AGAIN KONJOLA SHOWS HOW IT "MAKES GOOD"

Spanish-American War Veteran Is Jubilant Over Relief Modern Medicine Gave.

Age is no barrier to the merits of Konjola. Men and women in the seventies and eighties have given their sincere and voluntary endorsements telling of the amazing benefits derived through the use of Konjola.

MR. WILL C. EIBLE

Konjola may also be given to the infant with speedy and thorough results. Konjola is, indeed, a medicine for all the family. Meet the Konjola Man, at the Dow Drug Store, Penn Avenue and Sixth Street, Pittsburgh, and learn how Konjola's 32 ingredients go to the root and source of the ills of the stomach, liver, kidneys and bowels, and of rheumatism, neuritis and nervousness. What could be wiser than to profit by the experiences of others who, to their everlasting joy, put their faith in Konjola? With this thought in mind, read the grateful words of Mr. Will C. Eible, age 63, a Spanish-American War Veteran, who lives at 1043 Parmont Street, Pittsburgh. He said to the Konjola Man:

"Before I began taking Konjola I suffered terribly from stomach and kidney trouble, and my bowels seldom acted without the aid of a strong laxative. Sour stomach and bloating pains caused me much misery and distress. My back ached continually and, as a result of irregular bladder actions, I had to get up five or six times every night. My rest was broken, and I became nervous and weak.

"But six bottles of this Konjola surely made a wonderful change in my condition. I knew I had found the right medicine for my case before I had finished the second bottle. Now I feel better than in years. My kidneys have been strengthened and night rising is no longer necessary. Every ache has left my body; stomach miseries are gone, and my bowels are regular. I recommended Konjola to my brother and he is getting splendid results from its use."

Konjola's records contain countless endorsements telling how from six to eight bottles of this modern medicine won remarkable victories over stubborn ailments that had resisted and defied all else tried.

The Konjola Man is at the Dow Drug Store, Penn Avenue and Sixth Street, Pittsburgh, where he is meeting the public daily, introducing and explaining the merits of this new medicine. Konjola is sold also at all Dow stores in Pittsburgh and vicinity.

KDKA RESUMES AFTER STORM TIEUP

SIDE WALKS of PITTSBURGH

by WILLIAM PFARR

J. M. Loftis, superintendent of transportation for the Pittsburgh Railways, received the following report on an accident from a motorman, a graduate of the University of Pittsburgh, with a penchant for poetry:

"The night was dark and stormy,
The rails were slippery, too,

The gates were down at Twenty-eighth street
And me and my car went through."

Another motorman, an ex-farmer, wrote:

"The night was so dark that I could hardly see my hand in front of my face. I was coming down the Finleyville hill when a dark shape loomed up in front of me. It looked like a cow. I hit it. By golly, it was a cow."

Wearied of the emphasis which is given a hole-in-one after all these thousands, we have been trying futilely to have such news banned from the public prints. If, we contend, a golfer doesn't make a hole in one these days, that's news. For instance:

Paul Bower, the Bellevue artist, failed to make a hole in one on the Sewickley course yesterday. On the difficult eighth hole, Bower's drive was hooked viciously and the ball came to rest in a swamp some 185 yards from the cup. The young artist accepted his laurels gracefully.

J. A. Cullison, of the Pittsburgh Advertising Club, has figured out for some reason or other, than a Ford: the factory costs 20.8 cents per pound and beefsteak, at the wholesaler's, brings 21.5. . . But you can't climb the Wilkinsburg hill on high on a beefsteak. . . Edmund Erk, who was the late Congressman Porter's secretary, used to be a newspaperman himself. . . Eugene Eppley has fitted himself out an expensive home in his favorite hotel. . .

Luke Barnett has returned from what he feels was his most successful triumph in all these years. A Pittsburgh alumnus of Yale took Luke, disguised as a waiter, to a Yale reunion. Luke was so successful that the dinner ended in a riot amid broken dishes and swinging fists. And Luke, hailed by his audience, was elected an honorary member of an exclusive campus club—the Sheffield, our informant said, but we aren't sure.

At the Ebensburg show we tried to get hold of Charlie Schwab, the Homestead boy, to add his official denial of the story they tell of him showing a party of guests about his big estate at Loretto many years ago. We failed, but we'll tell the story anyhow.

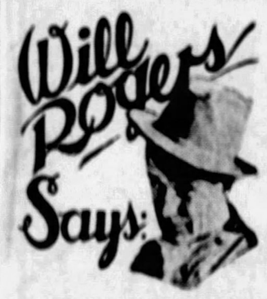
After trouping the grounds for some time, Charlie said, "Well, let's walk up to the house and get a drink."

"Walk!" ejaculated a guest. "Let's run!"



BEVERLY HILLS, Cal., July 7.

To the Editor of the Sun-Telegraph:

Flew over the Rockies last night with the air mail. Passed over Reno at 3 a. m. They were sleeping off one victim and dreaming of another. Lots of 'em just keep the same house from year to year. And they come the same time every year, unless some new husband becomes stingy particularly early, then they drop in sooner that year. Yesterday morning I had a fine visit in Des Moines with "Ding," the great political cartoonist. I' knows and he says the country is not going into the hands of receivers. We decided that Coolidge going to work shows that the unemployment situation is picking up.

Yours,
WILL.

2 BOROUGHS VOTE FOR REPEAL

Final Results to Be Announced Next Sunday; Reach 60,000 Taxpayers

Results of the poll in Oakmont, Sewickley, Verona and West View will be published tomorrow.

Sunday sports and amusements are wanted in the boroughs of Tarentum and Turtle Creek, filing of substantial returns in the Blue Law poll of Allegheny County shows as the voting enters its closing week.

Voters of the two boroughs favor repeal of the Blue Law by 3 to 1 majorities. They have cast a total of 865 ballots in the poll to date, about 27 per cent of the total May primary vote in both boroughs. The divisions are:

	Tarentum	Turtle Creek
Enforcement	91	90
Modification	52	26
Repeal	265	331

The total vote from Allegheny County in the poll reaches 60,899 with the latest tabulation, divided as follows:

	Men	Women	Total
Enforcement	5,349	4,166	9,515
Modification	3,093	1,679	4,772
Repeal	32,565	14,047	46,612

The totals for the county show a ratio of 4.9 votes for repeal for each vote for enforcement. The poll of Pittsburgh, which closed Sunday and which is included in the county poll, showed a ratio of 5.3 to 1 for repeal.

The poll will end this week and the final results will be published next Sunday. Voters of the county outside Pittsburgh are urged to mail their ballots immediately so that they will be included in the final count.

ARTIST DEPICTS GARDENS

By PENELOPE REDD.

No rose may blush unseen in Shadyside for Anna Belle Craig forswears souvenirs of foreign travel to paint the charm of Shadyside gardens. She commenced her pilgrimage in the garden of Francis Keating, Pembroke Place.

Penelope Redd

This garden with its Edith Barreto Parsons bronze accenting the round pool, its rose-covered arches, its individuality dominated by formal order, is a garden made for the restrained gallantry of Anna Belle Craig's style.

Miss Craig has at one time or another painted various gardens of the neighborhood. In a garden, still in the experimental stage, Miss Craig once took the liberty of adding blooms where they were not. The owner of the garden came around about November and said she must own that painting because she missed the garden. One bright June morn, she called Miss Craig to tell her that all the flowers were now blooming as Miss Craig had painted them. Thus did Anna Belle Craig become a vicarious landscape architect.

She will paint the Williams garden on Howe street which is one that almost always has an onlooker, so unexpected is its beauty on a city street. The Spear garden on Northumberland avenue is another well established one. Miss Craig will also make a study of the William Watson Smith garden on Wilkins avenue.

She may even venture to the West End Park which has the most varied appeal of any garden in the vicinity.

These paintings, with others which she is planning, will be shown as a garden group in the autumn. So have you a pet sunflower, or a hybrid delphinium, or tuberous-rooted begonia, before you are aware you may find its portrait in Anna Belle Craig's exhibition of Pittsburgh gardens.

Saving Girl

13-YEAR-OLDS TO RESCUE!

Charles Bronchain and Clarence Elwarner showing how they rescued an unidentified young girl clinging to the ledge (arrow) over P. R. R. tracks under Crafton Boulevard Bridge. She went down, couldn't go up.

BOYS SAVE GIRL TRAPPED ON CLIFF

Men Look Helplessly on As Youngsters Go to Her Rescue High Above Rails

Two 12-year-old boys were heroes today in the eyes of many Crafton residents for bravery last night, in dragging to safety a small girl who hung to a sapling on a ledge high over the tracks of the Pennsylvania Railroad under the Crafton boulevard bridge. While more than a score of persons watched, the boys aided the girl from her perilous position.

The girl and a companion had descended the hillside and were on the brink of the slope, looking down on the tracks below. As they began climbing back up the hillside they were seen to falter. One reached the top safely but the other commenced sliding backward. She clung to a sapling and cried for help.

CROSS ON CABLE

Charles Bronchain, of 2 Crafton boulevard, and Clarence Elwarner, of 26 Emerson street, watched only for a second. They bolted from the crowd and by hanging to a steel cable dangling from the bridge, made their way to the frightened girl. As they grasped her a mail train sped past below them.

The girl, a resident of the neighborhood, ran home before her identity was learned. The boys also walked away, uncomfortable under the admiring glances of witnesses to the rescue.

Charles in talking about the rescue said:

"We thought some of the grown men would be trying to save the girl, but when we saw no one doing anything, we just took hold of a cable that hangs down the incline from the bridge and went down.

TELL OF RESCUE

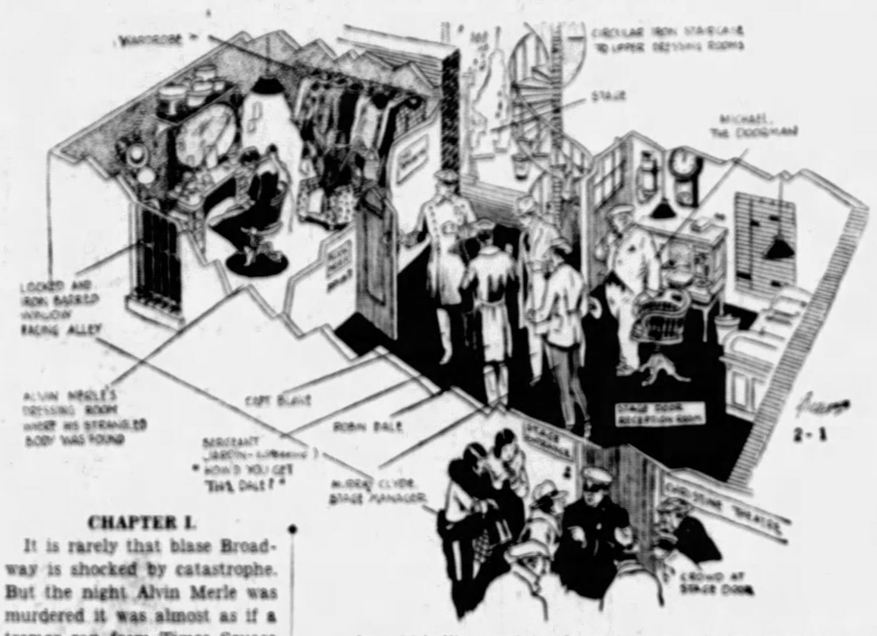
"The girl was about 50 feet from the ledge top and about 25 feet from the top of the 12-foot wall on the side of the tracks. Clarence got hold of her hand and I was below her. He pulled and I pushed, and that's all we did.

"It's lucky, though, we got there when we did, because just as we got hold of her a passenger train came past, and the girl was so frightened by the noise and the vibration that she would have let go if we hadn't been there."

Master Mysteries

By ARTHUR HOERL

His Last Performance



CHAPTER I.

It is rarely that blase Broadway is shocked by catastrophe. But the night Alvin Merle was murdered it was almost as if a tremor ran from Times Square to the Circle, when the news, in the mysterious fashion news has, was whispered among little groups on the corners, in the "speaks," and the night clubs. It was almost 12 when the crime was discovered, but by 1 the word had gone up and down the street, and into the side streets where life had begun to take on a rosy hue. The word of the mysterious murder added a little touch of blue.

Robin Dale had a night off. Strangely enough he had taken over a little trick for the dramatic department, and gone to see Alvin Merle in his final performance of "Paramour." After being a solid hit for two years on Broadway the closing performance was by way of being a celebration, and rated a story. So, having a night off, and never having seen "Paramour," Robin Dale worked. Alvin Merle had been the romantic idol of matinee girls for many seasons (for the ladies who came at night, too, for that matter), and had never before been more rightly billed as the last. Alvin Merle never knew it was his last on earth.

It was about midnight when the whisper drifted into Charlie's, where Robin Dale was aiding the cause of indigestion.

A drifter came in and sat down at the table. There were three or four of the boys present.

"Just met Boyd at the corner . . . he said hell's poppin'! Alvin Merle was found a short while ago in his dressing room—murdered, strangled!"

Robin Dale set down his glass with a bang.

"What! I just saw him tonight . . . was just mullin' over that last act of his. It stuck in my mind like a cameo! He's been murdered?"

"The news is all over Broadway."

Within a few minutes Dale was on his way to the Christine Theater, just off Broadway, on Forty-fourth. After a performance like that last act he was dead! Dale could not yet reconcile the two. He remembered the big punch vividly. Merle learned that the wife for whom he had sacrificed everything in his life has been selling herself willingly to any buyer for money he could not give her, and that the son he adores is not even his, but a nameless brat . . . in a rage of frenzy he slays her with his naked hands . . . the bottle of liquor through which he has trapped her is on the table, he gulps a drink from it . . . and calls the police as the curtain slowly falls . . .

It all pictured itself again as he hurried up Broadway, fanned by a balmy breeze of early spring. But news is news, and the murder of Broadway's most famous star was big news. Wait until Pop Beacon (he was on the desk that night) heard it.

Capt. Blake, of the Homicide Squad, and Sergt. Jardin were already at the theater when Robin Dale arrived. There were only two others in the small lobby inside the stage door, Murray Clyde, the stage manager, and Michael, the doorman. Murray Clyde was a dapper sort, although a little ruffled now by the tragic event. Michael, an old man, sat in his chair smoking a pipe. At his time of life, death was not such a tragic thing. The policeman outside the stage door knew Robin Dale, so he got by. There were a number of others gathered in little knots outside, at the entrance to the alley, which led off Forty-fourth street. The stage entrance was in the alley.

"Hello, Captain — Hello, Sarge." Capt. Blake greeted Dale, who was never unwelcome at times such as this. On a number of occasions in the past he had been of considerable assistance to the police in solving baffling crime cases. Sergt. Jardin was not so kindly disposed, he resented newspapermen prying into things which did not concern them, regardless of results.

"How'd you get this Dale? We haven't sent out a word yet."

"My nose for news, Sarge. Even if I tried to explain this strange phenomenon you wouldn't be able to grasp it. Got a cigaret?"

"Don't you believe in signs?" Jardin jerked his finger toward a "No Smoking" sign on the wall.

"All right I'll smoke my own then." And Dale lit a cigaret before he went on. He saw Capt. Blake go into a lighted dressing room and figured that was the scene of the crime. The entrance to the dressing room was directly opposite the stage door entrance, not more than 20 feet down the corridor. Dale noted that the doorman's chair was set so that Michael faced the dressing room with an unobstructed view. It was the only dressing room on the stage level, probably not having been intended as such, but transformed into one. Slightly to the right, and half way between the two doors was a circular iron staircase which led to the upper loft, where presumably the other dressing rooms were located. Robin Dale took in these details hurriedly.

"Should be an open and shut proposition, Sarge."

"Should be, but it ain't! It's so simple there's no sense to it."

"Tell me—maybe I'll help you with the puzzle."

For all his belligerent manner, Sergt. Jardin had a keen regard for Dale's ability, so he hesitated only a moment.

"That there's Merle's dressingroom. He want into it at two minutes to eleven. No one disturbed him until eleven-forty, when the stage manager here, who's been waiting at a restaurant for him, comes back wonderin' at the delay. He knocks, and there's no answer. Then he opens the door and there, at his dressing table, still in the same clothes he wore on the stage, sits Merle with a rope twisted around his neck, tied in three knots at the back, strangled to death. The funny part of it is that the doorman never left his seat from the time Merle went into the room, and swears that no one entered or left the dressing-room. And what's funnier still is that there's only one window in the room and that was shut on the inside and latched and it's got iron bars across it on the outside. It's so damned simple, it's crazy!"

"Looks like you and me are going to work, Sarge. Wait until I telephone the office."

LIGHTNING STRIKES LINES

Transformers Put Out Of Commission; Hospital, Home Hit; Streets Flooded

Out of commission all night as a result of being struck by lightning during the severe thunderstorm last night, Westinghouse Electric and Manufacturing Company radio station KDKA was back on the air again this morning. Lightning struck cables leadin into the broadcasting station on the Greensburg Pike, Wilkins Township, and damaged the transformers.

P. A. Boyd, in charge of the radio broadcasting for the company, said that the damage would not be more than $3,000. He stated the transmitting room had not been injured. The damage was confined to the transformers in the sub-basement of the building, he said.

A shower of bricks tumbled into the courtyard of St. Francis Hospital when lightning struck the smokestack of the hospital's power house during the thunderstorm. Hospital attaches said that no excitement prevailed among the patients.

LIGHTNING FIRES HOME

The home of William Moore, in Houston, was struck by lightning and set afire last night. The fire damaged the Moore quarters and the first floor, occupied by the confectionery store of John Rumop. Damage was estimated at $7,000. The lightning is believed to have struck a radio aerial on the roof of the two-story building.

In Center avenue at Morgan street, the roadway was reported to have broken, causing one-way traffic to be put into effect for a short time. City employes made temporary repairs to the crack. Police at the Center avenue station said the damage and traffic delay were slight.

Automobile traffic on many city streets and highways was interrupted by mud and silt being washed down from highways. There were no accidents reported due to the storm and no severe damage to roadways, police say.

LIGHTING PLANTS HIT

Turtle Creek Valley communities were without electric lights an hour and a half last night as a result of a lightning bolt striking a Duquesne Light Service Station in the Elmhurst Plan, Patton Township, near Turtle Creek, police reported.

The hill district of Pitcairn, was without light service for a half hour when a bolt struck two of the company's transformers in Highland avenue, Pitcairn.

CHURCH FIRED BY LIGHTNING

HARRISBURG, July 7.—(AP.)—A church was damaged and two barns destroyed by fire started by lightning during an electrical storm in this section yesterday.

The church damaged was St. Paul's Evangelical at Bald Hill, York County. A lightning bolt fired the belfry and the tower was destroyed.

The barns were in Perry County. Fallen trees halted traffic for a time on the Susquehanna Trail north of Harrisburg. Two highway patrolmen were stationed there throughout the night to warn motorists.

Man Buried Alive Three Hours in Well, Rescued

Buried under 15 feet of dirt for three hours when the walls of a well he was cleaning caved in, a camper at the Werner campground on the Allegheny river, Denny's station, today, was recovering from bruises and shock.

Rescue squads of the Duquesne Light and West Penn Power stations at Springdale, and Springdale and Harmarville firemen unearthed the victim. He was given treatment at the office of Dr. R. E. Shaw and later taken home.

The man's head was uncovered after an hour's digging and he was given artificial respiration until released two hours later.

TAXICAB DRIVER HELD UP ON 'HILL'

Fare Points Gun, Gets $18 From Victim; Pair Robbed Near Acmetonia

Held up by a Negro he had just driven from the downtown district, J. P. McGrath, a Yellow Cab driver of 2007 Watson street, was robbed of $18 at Bedford avenue and Somers street, early today, according to police. The Camera Question Box

Today's question—The Bureau of Parks is investigating the feasibility of installing public golf driving courses in the parks. Do you think the plan advisable?

Mrs. Silverberg

MRS. SAMUEL M. SILVERBERG, housewife, Squirrel Hill—Yes I think the plan most acceptable. Public driving courses would be greatly appreciated and would do a lot of good. Almost everybody is in favor of them, I believe.

Andy Petrolio

ANDY PETROLIO, Caddy Master at Schenley Park, Mt. Washington—It's a mighty good plan. I think, though, that there ought to be at least three or four more good golf courses besides these driving ranges.

Mrs. Grodstein

MRS. ESTA GRODSTEIN, housewife, Squirrel Hill—If driving ranges can possibly be put in the parks it will be a wonderful thing. They will benefit everybody and will be the answer to what a lot of persons have wanted for a long time.

Al McBride

AL M'BRIDE, golf pro at Schenley Park—They would be the best thing we could have if there was any place to put them. But the parks either have too many trees that can't be cut down or else the only places they could be put would be too dangerous.

Mrs. Schwartz

MRS. L. L. SCHWARTZ, golf enthusiast, Squirrel Hill—I think they ought to be installed for the benefit of the people who can't afford the other ranges. They're really a help to most of the beginners.

Ed. Kunold

ED. KUNOLD, caretaker golf course, Schenley—The idea is a good one. The public parks are handy for most people and such ranges would be patronized by more people than those situated where one has to drive a long way to get to them.

FALLS 30 FEET AS RAIL BREAKS

An iron rail on the Twenty-eighth Street Bridge gave way when a 4-year-old boy leaned on it, and the child, Henry Kissel, of 2647 Penn avenue, plunged 30 feet to the Pennsylvania Railroad tracks below. Cuts on the scalp were the only injuries found on the boy when he was taken to the West Penn Hospital. The accident occurred last night.

An X-ray was to be used today to determine if the boy has more serious hurts than the first examination disclosed.

He struck head first, George Schoeler, of 7 Underwood street, Overbrook, a railway employe who saw the accident, said. Schoeler took him to the hospital.

Henry had leaned against the rail in order to see better a shining object on the tracks below that had attracted his attention.

C. M. Reppert, chief engineer of the Department of Public Works, is investigating.

TRAPPED, CHOPPED OUT

DALLAS L. TOMPKINS, 11, SHOWING HIS TRAP

Dallas, 130 Marsden street, Hazelwood, showing on a board the width of the 8-inch passageway between two buildings in which he was caught when he tried to recover his ball. The hole he's in was chopped through one of the walls to extricate him—without the ball.

SAVED, MOURNS LOSING BALL

Dallas L. Tompkins, 11, of 130 Marsden street, Hazelwood, today had one regret.

He regretted that he did not get his ball after firemen had rescued him from a narrow space between two buildings by chopping a hole through a wall to get to him.

Tompkins and a half-dozen boys were playing baseball in Flowers avenue, last night when one of them batted the ball on the roof of a one-story frame building at 206 Flowers avenue. Tompkins climbed to the roof and discovered the ball fell into a space about eight inches wide between the buildings. He figured on a way to retrieve it by sliding into the opening.

When the frantic attempts of his companions to pull him out with clotheslines proved futile, firemen from No. 13 Engine Company were called. Young Tompkins had already slipped 14 feet and his shoes almost touched the ground when the firemen arrived.

The only way to effect a rescue was to chop a hole in the wall of the building at 206 Flowers avenue and drag him out.

The boy, after he had been pulled out from the hole which had been chopped just above his head, lamented:

"I didn't get my ball."

In the car were an extra pair of license plates and burglar tools, police said. Gamble said he loaned the car to Carney. Carney is in Allegheny General Hospital with a broken ankle sustained while trying to escape.

FIGHTS FOR COT IN LOCKUP

The story of a man who likes comfort, even if he has to fight for it, was related to Magistrate Charles Papale in East End Police Court yesterday when Harold Bailey, 40, of 161 Reider street and Charles Schunk, 54, of 1250 Paulson avenue were given hearings.

Police say they had arrested both on drunkenness charges. Schunk was asleep in a cell when Bailey was placed in the same compartment. Police hearing a disturbance, found Schunk on the floor and Bailey on the bunk. He had thrown his cellmate to the cement floor and taken his sleeping place, police testified. Schunk was discharged and taken to the Pittsburgh Hospital for a deep cut on the head. Bailey was fined $10.

TRACE $25,000 BANK SHORTAGE

Surety company investigators and detectives today were continuing to investigate the disappearance of $25,000 from the reserve cash of the Washington Trust Company, Fifth avenue and Washington street. The bank shortage, which was discovered Wednesday, is fully covered by insurance, W. C. McEldowney, president of the bank, today stated.

Mr. McEldowney said that when the books of the reserve cash were balanced Wednesday morning the account was in perfect condition. At the close of the day's business when another check was made, the $25,000 loss was discovered. The American Surety Company, which protects the reserve cash account up to $250,000, was then notified.

According to Mr. McEldowney, there apparently has been no attempt made to cover up the shortage through manipulation of the books. No arrests have been made.

PATRICIA PITT'S SPRIGHTLY COMMENT ON PITTSBURGH'S SOCIETY HAPPENINGS

Mrs. J. C. Chaplin Leaving Soon to Visit Mother In Hamilton, Mass.

Travelers do not always wait for the sun to speed them on their happy way, for in spite of the recent showers I know several people leaving or who have gone to various places for the summer. And I have more to tell you about a bride of this week, too.

Of course the social whirl has been dying down considerably during the last month and during the rest of this month there will be very little going on among society folks here in Pittsburgh. A great many I happen to know are yachting almost the entire summer. And now before I tell you about the wedding I want to tell you about those coming and going.

On Thursday Mrs. James C. Chaplin of Sewickley is leaving for Hamilton, Mass., to visit her mother, Mrs. Jonathan Brown, Jr. Mrs. Clinton Childs and her two daughters, Elizabeth and Laura Childs, and her son, Clinton L., are sailing for Europe on Wednesday. They probably will be gone until fall.

Travel Notes

Mary Shiras left last Tuesday for Europe after having spent several days in Cleveland.

I have already told you something about the wedding on Thursday of Jean Brown Scott, daughter of the John R. K. Scotts of Philadelphia. She is marrying Dr. Donald Weston Darby, ex-college gridiron star of the University of Virginia of which he is a graduate, and is a Philadelphia aviator. The ceremony is to take place in the historical old Washington Memorial Chapel in Valley Forge. Dr. Darby is the son of Dr. and Mrs. George D. B. Darby, of Linlithgown, Merion, Pa.

Scott Wedding

Jean is a well known horsewoman and has entered a string of horses in almost every Sewickley horse show for several years. Her cousin, Janet Hardie, daughter of the Walter Logan Hardies of Bartlett street, is to be the maid of honor. The reception and dinner are to be at Glenhardie Farms, the Scott home near Stafford, Pa. The bridegroom-elect and his bride will leave for a European tour, returning in the fall.

Jean, you will be interested in knowing, is a graduate of Mme. Roy's School in Paris, France.

During the past two years Dr. Darby has made two sensational flights. In June he descended over Amotal, N. J., in a blazing plane, and last December 20, you will remember, he flew from Moorestown, N. J., to central airport in Camden, N. J., with a boy clinging to the tail of his plane.

The wedding, I might add, is going to be a simple affair, with few guests besides the members of the immediate families.

And still more travelers. Mrs. Frank J. Kier, of Beechwood boulevard, and her daughter, Miss Frances Kier, and her son, Albert, will land in New York, July 22, after a winter abroad. They return here July 25. Frances has been studying art in Paris, and is to be a deb this season. Albert has been attending school in Switzerland. The Kiers will leave for their summer home in Michigan, the week after their arrival here.

To Land July 23

The Canadian Rockies have lured the John McCartney Kennedys and their daughter, June, of Bigelow boulevard. And Sunday Mrs. David Wilson Miller, of Irwin drive, Edgeworth, and her daughter, Winifred, and her son, David, left for Los Angeles, Cal., and Seattle, Wash., where they will take the boat trip to Prince Rupert.

The J. Barlow Cullums, of Centennial avenue and East drive, Sewickley, and their daughter, Molly Cullum, have gone to Murray Bay, Canada, where they have taken a cottage for the summer.

The James Stapleton Crutchfields, of Beaver road, left last week for Montreal, Canada, and sailed on the Aurania for London, where they will visit their daughter and son-in-law, the Andrew Tod Roys. The Horace Forbes Bakers, of Beaver road, with Mrs. Baker's mother, Mrs. Francis J. Torrance, of Beaver road, leave today for Gloucester, Mass., to occupy their summer cottage.

Visit London

Dorothy Hardie, daughter of the John L. Hardies, of Forbes street, is entertaining two house-guests at the summer home of her mother and father, Natalia Newberry, of New Rochelle, N. Y., and Katherine Snyder, of Bound Brook, former classmates at Ogontz, are the guests. Dorothy has but recently returned from visiting her aunt, Mrs. James Duncan Orr, of Short Hills, N. J.

Covers were laid for 40 at the wedding breakfast. Mr. and Mrs. Billing will make their home in Florence avenue.

SCHOOLS LEAD CITY BUILDING

WASHINGTON, July 7.—(Universal.)—Fourteen principal American cities—four of them in New York—spent more for school construction during the decade ended December 31, 1928, than for any other item of public construction.

The survey was made at President Hoover's suggestion for the purpose of appraising public works construction as a factor in maintaining public economic stability.

The 14 "honor" cities are: New York, Chicago, Philadelphia, Detroit, Boston, Cleveland, St. Louis, Indianapolis, Buffalo, Rochester, Albany, Newark, St. Paul and New Haven.

New York City spent about $285,195,000 for education buildings out of a total public works outlay of about $1,000,000,000.

OPERA ASSURED N. Y. SUBURB

WHITE PLAINS, N. Y., July 7.—(Universal.)—The Metropolitan Opera Company's decision to present two opera performances at the Westchester County Center, during the month of December has enthused Otto H. Kahn, president of the company and chairman of its board of directors. It is an experiment, he pointed out, which, if it meets with success and the proper response from the people of Westchester, will make a regular opera season in Westchester a possibility next year.

Mr. Kahn believes art should be brought to the people. He said:

"I believe in decentralization in everything—in government, in business and in art. That is, to my mind, the best solution or prescription for living conditions which we face in this age.

"If we make art accessible to the people, the people will go after art."

FORTHCOMING SILHOUETTE CASTS A SLENDER SHADOW

Paris Bureau, Pittsburgh Sun-Telegraph.

PARIS, JULY 7. —If it is assumed that all men are born equal, then it is also assumed by the sar that all women are born and remain slim. For many of the eve ning frocks seen at various couturiers are quite obviously of a type designed for the woman of slim proportions. Whether it is the clothes that keep the women slim, or the slimness of the women that is responsible for the styles we have not as yet ascertained, but whatever it is, we notice that many of the new models draw attention to the hip and waistlines, whereas in former years these points were ignored or skillfully minimized.

We do not mean to imply that the present frocks and those designed for early Autumn wear are tubular, but they certainly do hug the figure, and are cut on snug or clinging lines. Curves are back, but they are certainly not to the front, as far as the mode is concerned.

A VERY GOOD idea of the prevailing and forthcoming silhouette may be gathered from a study of the Vionnet model of heavy, supple black satin shown today. The bodice and upper part of the skirt are fitted closely to the lines of the figure, but the softly hanging circularly cut skirt flounce is very fetches to the ankles at wide. The hem-line side and back, but is somewhat shorter in front and the V-shaped decolletage is repeated in back. The roses that encircle the waist and hips are made of black satin ribbon.

WE GO IN FOR material mergers in a big way here and the dress shown shows what can be done with crepe and wool. For the upper part of the frock is of pastel blue crepe in a heavy quality, while the rest of the model is of a light woolen in the same shade. The long, close sleeves are cut in one piece with the yoke and with the wide rearf which ties in a large bow. There is a narrow string belt of crepe tying to one side. The skirt has a circular movement and is in one piece with the lower part of the bodice. This is a recent and much liked Vionnet model.

ANSWER FILED IN 'QUACK' SUIT

JUNCTION CITY, Kan., July 7.—(AP.)—Dr. Morris Fishbein, Chicago, and Dr. W. S. Yates, Junction City, have filed answers to the $600,000 damage suit brought against them in District Court by Dr. John R. Brinkley, goat gland specialist, of Milford, Kan.

Dr. Fishbein, editor of the Journal of the American Medical Association, admitted authorship of an article, "John R. Brinkley, Quack," on which the suit is based, presented in the Journal, and Dr. Yates admits circulation of a reprint of the article.

Each added, however, that he believed the material in the article to be true and that the statements therein were uttered in "fair comment on a matter of public interest" and in an "endeavor to prevent fraud and imposition."

The case probably will be tried in November.

Dr. Brinkley is scheduled to be called before the Kansas State Board of Medical Registration and Examination, July 15, on charges of unethical practices.

CHOLERA GAINS IN PHILIPPINES

MANILA, July 7.—(AP.)—Cholera has made widespread gains in the Philippines during the past week, Department of Health figures released here revealed.

The disease has entered several previously unaffected places, despite efforts of health authorities to check it. Deaths since June 20 were estimated at 221.

Cholera has appeared for the first time in the provinces of Pangasiman and Bulucan on the island of Luzon, the island of Leyte and in the city of Cebu. As a result, Dr. R. W. Hart, director of the United States Public Health Service in the Philippines, placed the city under a modified quarantine requiring examination of all departing passengers and their vaccination.

The official report for the period from June 20 to July 1 places the number of cases in the islands at 436 and the deaths at 188.

NATION'S DEATH RATE REDUCED

NEW YORK, July 7.—(AP.)—The revised report of the joint committee on health problems of the American Medical Association and the National Educational Association, made public here, says that the death rate of the nation has been cut in half since 1900. In the case of some diseases, notably diphtheria, it has been reduced 95 per cent.

The report hailed the diphtheria death rate reduction as one of the most striking victories recorded in the history of medicine during the last 50 years. This victory was principally due to the discovery of diphtheria antitoxin and toxin-antitoxin used to immunize children, it said.

The report disclosed that reduction in the diphtheria was equaled by that for typhoid and paratyphoid.

BOND HOLDINGS OF STATE GROW

HARRISBURG, July 7.—(AP.)—Investments held by the state of Pennsylvania increased 62 per cent, or from $58,639,042 to $94,139,405, in the three complete fiscal years of the Fisher administration.

The report of Arthur P. Townsend, budget secretary to Gov. Fisher, reveals also that the largest single investment holdings of the state are school bonds, of which the state owns $32,707,405. The report covers the period from June 1, 1927, to June 1, 1930.

It was also announced that in the three years the debt of the state for road building was reduced from $97,888,000 to $89,221,000, a reduction of $8,667,000. On June 1 last there was sufficient money in the sinking fund to meet the obligation.

BUCS SEEK NEW STRENGTH

SPORT COMMENT by JAMES J. LONG

Mack Strong for Boley.
Change Only Temporary.
Bucs in Another Rut.
Spencer's Hard Luck.
Senators Keep It Up.
Come-Back of Tilden.

A'S SINK OR SWIM WITH OLD LINEUP

RUMORS BOBBING UP from time to time that Connie Mack has lost faith in the old line-up that carried the A's to the world championship last year and that one or more of the regulars will be replaced by younger men during the greater part of the remaining half of the season, get a rise out of the veteran manager. It isn't often that Connie pays any attention to outside reports about his club, but he objects vigorously to the story that parts of the team are cracking.

Connie Mack

It is true that Mack has done an unusual lot of shifting this year, but he wants it understood that in all cases these changes were only temporary ones, necessitated by the incapacitation of veteran regulars. He denied that he is dissatisfied with the work of any of the older players or has ever thought of making any permanent alterations in the lineup and declares that, sink or swim, he means to go throughout to the finish with the team that won the world series last fall. If he can't win the flag again this year he will go down fighting with the old guard.

MACK TAKES PARTICULAR exception to a rumor that he benched Joe Boley because he has more confidence in young Eric McNair, and that it is his plan to turn the short-stopping job over permanently to Joe's youthful understudy. This is the second time within a couple of weeks that McNair has replaced Boley.

Connie is loud in his praises of McNair, but denies that he is losing confidence in Boley. He says McNair is only filling in temporarily for Boley just as he also filled in at third while Jimmy Dykes was in the hospital. But for an injured wrist, Boley would not have been taken out of the lineup, Mack explains. A pitched ball struck Joe on the wrist during batting practice, and while he can field and throw he cannot grip a bat. When he has recovered, he will be back in the line-up, according to the boss of the White Herd.

MACK SAYS HE is at a loss to account for the impression which appears to prevail in some quarters that Boley is a weak spot in the Athletics' line-up. He doesn't hit a lot, and his throwing arm isn't the strongest in the world, yet he has proved very valuable to the A's.

In fact some umpires, rival players and others whose work brings them into close touch with Boley are quoted as saying he is the best shortstop in the American League. He knows how to play a ball, doesn't buckle up under a drive on which the game may hinge, and in spite of his supposedly weak arm his peg manages to get the runners to first base, which, after all is all that matters.

Joe Boley

THE WINNING STREAK of five caught with which the Pirates revived the dropping hopes of local fans late in June appears to have been only a false alarm. Far from making good the promise then offered of a sustained brace, the Bucs have fallen into another rut, and yesterday's double downfall in St. Louis added two more beatings to the newest losing spell, in which they have dropped eight of their last 10 games. Instead of making the expected progress toward the first division they have continued to slide in the other direction until they are now only three games above the Reds and seventh place.

IT WOULD HAVE counted for a whole lot more toward the benefit of the Pittsburgh team if some of the tall hitting done by Paul Waner in the second game yesterday had been done in the first half of the bargain bill. As it was it did nothing more than make the elder Waner the first Pirate to turn in five hits in a game this season.

Twelve other National League players have made five hits in nine innings. They are Lefty O'Doul, Freddie Lindstrom, Johnny Frederick, Taylor Douthit, Virgil Davis, Babe Herman, Del Bissonette, Hazen Cuyler, Riggs Stephenson, Hark Wilson, Benny Southern and Sparky Adams. O'Doul has done it twice. Al Simmons, Carl Reynolds and Bib Falk are the only American Leaguers who have accomplished it to date. Jimmy Foxx once made six hits, but that was done in a 13-inning game.

GLENN SPENCER is the eighth pitcher in the majors to hold an opposing club to two hits, the lowest mark of the year, but he had the tough luck to be the only one to lose his game. One other Pirate hurler, Larry French, let the Reds down with a single and a homer on April 17, winning 7 to 1.

Glenn Spencer

Bill Hallahan, Jim Elliott, Charley Root and Bill Walker are the other National League hurlers who have pitched two-hit games. Hub Pruett and Fred Fitzsimmons shared in one other performance of that kind. Milt Gaston and Ed Morris on the same club are the only American Leaguers who have done it. Morris pitched a second two-hit game, but it went only six innings.

WILLIAM F. O'BRIEN of Franklin, writes: "Though the Pirate pitching staff has braved recently, it has only seven irreparable members, as Swetonic and Walter cannot be counted, and I should like to suggest the names of a few minor league hurlers, any of whom would, in my opinion, be of considerable help. Here they are: Wiley Moore, of St. Paul, former Yankee, who has won something like 18 games and who is my best bet for a place on the Buccaneer corps; Lefty Heimach, of Toledo; Stewart Bolen, of Baltimore; Cole, of the Missions; Cantrell, of Toronto; Freitas, of Sacramento, and Grant, of Jersey City. All are likely-looking prospects and if one or two of them can be obtained the Bucs will be strengthened considerably in the pitching department."

THE WASHINGTON SENATORS continue to make the Athletics step on it to keep ahead of them in the American League race. Walter Johnson's warriors, who have just taken the Yankees for four in a row and piled up seven successive wins, have had more winning streaks of seven games or more than any other club in either major league. Twice they have won eight straight and twice they have bagged seven in a row.

The Senators have won 15 of their last 17 games and averted for the time being, at least, any danger of being overtaken by the Yanks. The New Yorkers are in their worst slump of the year. After winning 26 out of 34 straight games they have now lost six in succession.

IF GREAT BRITAIN has any golf or tennis titles left they are only minor ones. As far as major championships are concerned, the

They were Peter Hallihan, of the Schenley team; Arthur Weltner, another Schenley lad, who scored a hole in one in the first William Randolph Hearst tourney; Sam Musico of Thornburg; J. Broskey, of the Stanton Heights team and Brother of Charley, who is in second place; Ben Crawford, of the Pup's Foot team.

The next boys in line were John Damish, 75; Joe McAfee, 75; Paul Cralle, 75; Louis Kunsw, 76; Russell Leax, 76; Charles McCool, St. Clair, 77; Joseph Unso, 77; Henry Rakoski, 77; Nemo Sherba, 77, and Earl Cralle, 77.

BROSKEY PROTECTED

Although the score of Charles Broskey was protested by several persons, no official decision by the golf tournament officials was returned early in the afternoon.

The Stanton Heights team took the lead in the club caddie team competition with a total of 294. Alcoma was second with 318, St. Clair third with 341, and Thornburg next with 361.

John Jay Burke, honorary director of the tournament, hit the first ball this morning, and later addressed the assembled contestants.

Civic officials, who were scheduled to appear and greet the boys, did not attend in the morning, but it was expected that Gene Connelley, Lloyd Waner and Steve Swetonic, the latter pair Pirate baseball stars, would be on hand to say "hello" to the boys.

Joe Stevenson, of Penn, Pa., the defending champion, was given a big ovation at the tee as he started play.

The Jeannette High School team was entered in the school competition, making five schools in the event.

RECORD ENTRY LIST

The Pittsburgh Sun-Telegraph's Hearst junior tournament this year has established a new record for junior competition. A total of 998 entries were received for the tournament, the others aside from the 365 playing today having been eliminated in preliminary club caddie qualifying tests.

There are 32 club caddie teams waging a merry battle for the beautiful silver plaque, the like of which was won by the Castle Shannon Golf Club last year.

Four high school teams, two from Taylor Allderdice, another Ellsworth-Cokeburg High, are fighting for inaugural triumph in the high and preparatory school event, the winner of which is to receive a silver loving cup.

Last year Joseph Stevenson, of Penn, Pa., won the second annual William Randolph Hearst tourney when he scored a 69—and Joe, this year as a member of the Greensburg Country Club team is out there defending his crown this

PIRATES LOSE DOUBLE BILL TO CARDS

By CHARLES J. DOYLE,
Staff Correspondent.

ST. LOUIS, July 7.—Manager Jewel Ens today gave a good impression of a battalion commander in the act of reassembling his forces after a decisive defeat. Jewel came to St. Louis after a grueling five-game series with a squad so small as to allow for only a few utility players, and after the Cardinals had finished with the Buccos yesterday the pilot indeed had a job on his hands in trying to line up a club, especially a pitcher, for the game today.

To say there was a rout of the Buccos on the hot Sunday in St. Louis would not be far from the truth. The Cards won both games, 2 to 1 and 13 to 4. Today Ens must start a pitcher who has had insufficient rest, unless he decides to call upon Martin Lang, who never started a major league game. Ens has only seven pitchers here for the hard series. Moreover, he has only two extra infielders and one extra outfielder aside from Howard Grosskloss, the collegian.

CELLAR YAWNS

The cellar is yawning for the Pirates and the team may skid into that position unless reinforcements are obtained. Major leaguers are very hard to secure, but unless determined effort is made in this direction, the team is likely to stay in the second division for a long time.

And when a team is down, don't look for any favors. Glenn Spencer pitched a two-hit masterpiece in the first game yesterday but lost it on account of the impotence of his own team's attack and a disputed decision at second. Taylor Douthit, leading off in the ninth round, hit a homer into the left field stands. It was only the second hit of the contest. Jess Haines held the Buccos to seven hits in this battle. Paul Waner made a mistake in failing to slide at the home plate in the sixth. A slide might have tallied a run that would have put the Buccos ahead.

GRIMES WINS SECOND

Burleigh Grimes took the measure of his former mates in the closing encounter. Grimes did a lot of staggering but not as much as the Buccaneer pitchers of the contest. Ervin Brame tried to outdo Grimes in the last, but the big fellow, who has not been right since his sickness, fell before the home offensive.

Heinie Meine will be asked to pitch for the Pirates today, al-

Coggeshall Takes Title by Default

CHICAGO, July 7.—(AP)—Clifford Butler, of New Orleans, intercollegiate singles tennis champion, was forced to default to Harris Coggeshall, of Des Moines, in the finals of the Western singles championship event yesterday because of a cramp in his left leg. The score stood at 5 all in the fifth set when the Southerner was disabled.

ALLISON, VAN RYN WIN

WIMBLEDON, England, June 7.—(AP)—John Van Ryn and Wilmer Allison, young American tennis stars, won the British men's doubles championship today for the second successive year, beating their countrymen John Doeg and George Lott, in straight sets in the final, 6-3, 6-3, 6-2.

Seventy-five hundred spectators, who had come to watch the two strong American pairs fight it out in what was expected to be a gripping five-set match, saw Van Ryn and Allison at the peak of their form, sink Lott and Doeg without a trace. Not even Doeg's famous service could keep his team in the running.

Allison and Van Ryn entered today's match as slight favorites despite their defeat at the hands of Lott and Doeg the United States champions, in the final of the Queens' Club tournament two weeks ago. But few were prepared to see Lott and Doeg overwhelmed as they were today.

The Lott-Doeg combination which beat the French Davis Cup pair of Henri Cochet and Jacques Brugnon on the way to the final as well as the Australians Harry Hopman and Jim Willard, was riddled as though by machine gun fire when the defending champions opened their hair-trigger attack from close range.

Van Ryn and Allison once more proved themselves well worthy of world championship honors, and they added the finishing touches to an unprecedented American sweep of British titles.

Bill Tilden and Mrs. Helen Wills Moody in singles, Mrs. Moody and Miss Elizabeth Ryan in women's doubles and Van Ryn and Allison in men's doubles. Americans all, now have captured championships in their respective classes. In addition, Miss Ryan and Jack Crawford, of Australia, the lone non-American to share in the laurels, won the honors in mixed doubles.

In an exhibition doubles match, Gregory Mangin, Newark, N. J., and Berkeley Bell, Dallas, Tex., lost to Henry Austin and J. R. Olliff, England, 4-6, 4-6, 6-2, 6-2, 6-3.

YOUNG JACK THOMPSON — YOUNG CORBETT

Thompson, welterweight champion of the world, takes a count of nine in his bout with Young Corbett, Fresno (Cal.) southpaw. Corbett is the uncrowned champion of the class. He also defeated Jackie Fields in a non-title bout before Jackie passed the crown to Thompson.

Bobby Jones Leads In Open 'Tune Up'

MINNEAPOLIS, Minn., July 7 (INS).—Bobby Jones was hard at work today on Interlachen Country Club's course, the scene of the Atlanta star's next golf conquest.

On Thursday Jones will defend his National Open golf championship here and Bobby has outlined as diligent a plan of practice as any of the other contenders.

Leading the rest of aspirants yesterday in practice play, Jones scored par 72 twice over the difficult course, establishing beyond a doubt that he will put up a dangerous defense for his title.

Frequently the champion would deliberately shoot into the rough or to a sandpit just for the practice of working out into the fairway.

TRADES MAKE NATS THREAT

Associated Press.

A large part of the first half of the major league baseball season has been spent in strenuous efforts on the parts of various managers to strengthen their clubs for the latter part of the year, and the success of their efforts is quite evident in the current standings of the clubs.

Washington's big deals with the Browns and White Sox turned out to be an important factor in making the American League campaign a duel between the Senators and the Athletics. The acquisition of Heinie Manush gave them some batting punch, while Al Crowder has turned out to be an effective pitcher. Art Shires and Dave Harris, formerly of Chicago, also have helped improve the Senators' batting average.

SHIRES' HIT WINS

The result is that the Senators and the Athletics today are tied for the league lead. It was Shires who brought about the tie, coming through with a pinch single with the bases full in the tenth inning to beat the New York Yankees yesterday, 3 to 2.

The Athletics kept their place in the sun by winning their third close decision in a row from the Boston Red Sox, 4 to 3. George Earnshaw scored his eleventh victory of the year, gaining a slight edge over Dan MacFayden.

The fourth-place Cleveland Indians showed signs of improvement as they shut out the St. Louis Browns, 7 to 0. Waite Hoyt also pitched well and led Detroit to a 5-to-2 victory over the Chicago White Sox.

BOONE COMES THROUGH

The Robins, who chose to add strength by obtaining Ike Boone from the Pacific Coast League, found good reason to be pleased with their new acquisition. Boone made his debut yesterday and played the principal role as the Robins regained first place in the National League by beating the Boston Braves, 10 to 4. He hit a home run and a single and made a great catch of a fly, diving into the bleachers to grab the ball.

Cincinnati helped bring about this latest disturbance in the standing, which put Brooklyn

PILOTS BATTLE OVER WEIGHT FOR BOUT

By HARRY KECK,
Sports Editor.

If Buck McTiernan and Farmer Joe Cooper can get half as sore at each other as their managers are in their behalf, the return clash between the Swissvale and Terre Haute fist-flingers, the 10-round main bout at the Meyers Bowl, North Braddock, tonight, should be a punching classic.

Farmer Joe Cooper.

Bunny Buntach, manager of McTiernan, is considerably exercised over some of the things Broadway Johnny Cox, pilot of the Hoosier agriculturalist, has been saying about his protege ever since their first meeting at Motor Square Garden last November when Cooper edged out a disputed decision. Cooper has boxed in these parts three times since then and every time Cox has bombarded the local newspapers and promoters with literature to the effect that Cooper had ruined McTiernan's budding career and if he ever got Buck into the ring again, he would make him jump over the top rope.

ARGUE OVER WEIGHT

A few days ago, Cox began a dispute about the weight for tonight's bout, claiming he signed for 152 pounds and Cooper can make 144, although he often boxes around 147. Buntach's contract calls for 153 pounds, give or take a pound, which means a maximum of 154. Cox says there won't be any fight unless Buck comes in at 152 and Bunny counters with the crack that Cox and Cooper are beginning to crawl on their boasts now that the time has arrived for them to make good. Naturally, Buck and Cooper also are a bit steamed up about all of this fuss in the hot weather and it doesn't require much imagination to picture the possibility of having all of this cross-firing end up in a fight. If the fight is in the ring, the fans will get a break.

As a sort of last-minute fling, Buntach this morning said he wished to go on record that this could be the first fight in Pennsylvania with the foul rule thrown out. "McTiernan will not claim a foul, regardless of where or how he is hit," Bunny declared, "and I only hope Cooper feels the same way about it. I don't want him to take the easy way out, as Andy DiVodi did when Buck hit him in the stomach in the same ring last summer and DiVodi, a notorious foul claimer, begged off and got away with it just when Buck had him primed for a knockout."

NEWTON MEETS BRANNON

Ray Newton, of Mansfield, O., and Eddie Brannon, Negro, of the Hill, two good punching lightweights, meet in the eight-round semi-final, with Harry Spencer, of Washington, Pa., and Young Jack McVey, of Cleveland, middleweights, boxing the second bout, and Frankie Moran, of Homewood, and Angelo Vergione, of Swissvale, featherweights, meeting in the six-round opener, at 8:45 daylight saving time.

The only other boxing shows in the Pittsburgh district this week are scheduled for Thursday night, at Hickey Park, Millvale, and at Washington, Pa. Midget Mike O'Dowd, veteran featherweight puncher, of Louisville, meets Johnny Willis, classy Negro, of Erie, in the 10-round main bout and Al Becker, of Sheraden, and Jimmy Belmont, of Braddock, overgrown welterweights, box the eight-round semi-final at Hickey Park. A double windup is billed at Washington, with Maxie Strub, of Erie, boxing Jimmy Neal, of Cincinnati, and Ray Collins, of Erie, tangling with Dud Eades, of Indianapolis, in the other 10-rounder. Harry Spencer and Georgie Chambers are paired for a six-rounder.

George Godfrey, who recently lost on a foul to Primo Carnera, boxes Frankie Simms, Cleveland knockout star, in a 12-round bout at Taylor Bowl, Cleveland, tomorrow night.

SUN-TELEGRAPH SPORTS

Stars and Scene in Junior Tourney

DANNY STEVENSON JOE STEVENSON

Joe Stevenson, winner of the Pittsburgh Sun-Telegraph junior golf tournament last year, defended his title in the third annual competition at Schenley Park today. His younger brother, Danny, also was a contestant.

FIELD TEES OFF

The annual Pittsburgh Sun-Telegraph junior golf championship tournament for the William Randolph Hearst trophy attracted a field of 365 young linksmen to the Schenley Park municipal course today. Here are a few of the contestants grouped around the first tee waiting to tee off in the big event.

TWO COURSES HOLD EVENTS TODAY

Two golf tourneys are being played on local links today, aside from the William Randolph Hearst junior event at Schenley Park. The Caddie-masters' Golf Association is staging another of its regular monthly events, this time at the Edgewood Country Club. Members of the Edgewood Country Club have contributed several very fine prizes for the competition and this evening will dine the contestants.

One of the largest women's events of the season is being played today at the Pittsburgh Field Club, where the annual women's invitation tournament is being held.

Tomorrow the qualifying round for the National public links championship will be played at the Schenley Park municipal links, with Kenneth Witherow, of the U. S. G. A. public links committee, directing things. Four Pittsburghers will qualify to represent this city in the championship, which is to be held next month at Jacksonville, Fla.

Post-entries are being received by the Pennsylvania Golf Association for the state amateur championship Wednesday, Thursday and Friday at the Allegheny Country Club. The lists will close after tomorrow, however.

CUE EXHIBITION TONIGHT

[illegible] former world pocket billiard champion, will give an exhibition in the lobby of the Allegheny Branch, Y. M. C. A., at 8 o'clock this evening. He will play two 50-point matches and give an exhibition of trick and fancy shots. The public is invited to attend.

WATER MEET POSTPONED

The water polo and beauty parade scheduled at the Knox Bottom Pool, Swissvale, yesterday by the Willow Pool Swimming Club was postponed until next Sunday. The postponement was caused by a mixup in dates.

TONIGHT'S FIGHTS

Buck McTiernan vs. Farmer Joe Cooper, 10 rounds; Ray Newton vs. Eddie Brannon, 8 rounds, and Harry Spencer vs. Young Jack McVey and Frankie Moran vs. Angelo Vergione, 6 rounds each, Myers Bowl, North Braddock.

Primo Carnera in exhibition, Massillon, O.

Young Firpo vs. Joey Williams, 10 rounds, Atlantic City, N. J.

Eddie Murdock vs. Lope Tenorio and Hubert Gallo vs. Sammy White, 10 rounds each, Dexter Park, New York.

Harpster Wedding Invitations Out

Invitations are out for the wedding of Howard Harpster, former Carnegie Tech football star, now Geneva College coach, and Miss Margaret Annabelle Jones, daughter of Mr. and Mrs. Athelstan Lloyd Jones, of Akron, O., Harpster's home town, to be held on Saturday evening, July 26, at 8 o'clock in the First Methodist Episcopal Church, Akron.

morning, with a large gallery tagging him.

The individual winner today, and all contestants whether they are playing on a team or not are eligible to this competition, will receive a new and even more beautiful William Randolph Hearst trophy than has been awarded in the past. He also will receive a set of matched steel-shafted irons and a solid gold medal.

To the second low scorer will go a Hagen driver, steel-shafted, and a gold medal, while third prize is a mashie and a silver medal and fourth, a putter and a bronze medal. Any boy fortunate enough to score a hole in one, such as Tony Onoretta, of the Schenley Park caddie team did in the preliminary qualifying test, also will receive a gold medal.

BANQUET FOR VISITORS

Following the tournament arrangements are to be made for a banquet, the prize winners and officials of the tourney to be feted. At that time the prizes will be presented the fortunate golfers.

Every contestant in today's tourney is receiving a book of United States Golf Association rules from the Golf Tournament Editor with the compliments of the Pittsburgh Sun-Telegraph as he leaves the tee. In its effort to find out how many boys may compare with the great Bobby Jones, the Pittsburgh Sun-Telegraph has not lost sight of the fact that a knowledge of the rules is as important as skill in playing the game.

BOUTS FOR CHAMP

SAN FRANCISCO, July 7.—(INS.)—Young Jack Thompson, world welterweight champion, today tentatively had accepted three non-title bouts. The first probable will be against Johnny Jadick, of Boston, at Shibe Park, Philadelphia, in August. The other two bouts negotiated will be with Tommy Freeman in Cleveland and with Bucky LaMotte in Detroit.

Sport Vignettes

If you want to get a real thrill out of Young America in athletic competition, you ought to attend one of the Pittsburgh Sun-Telegraph's junior golf tournaments for the William Randolph Hearst trophy . . . . The third annual event is on at the Schenley Park public links today . . . . The accepted entry for this fixture this year broke all records, reaching a total of just two less than 1,000 . . . . A field of 365 young players qualified for the tourney proper today . . . . And don't forget that the local public courts tennis champions in men's and women's singles will be decided under the auspices of your favorite newspaper in the tournament getting under way at six public parks next Monday, with entries closing on Wednesday . . . . These winners will qualify to play for the national public parks title at Washington, D. C., next month, and will be sent there as the guests of the Pittsburgh Sun-Telegraph . . . . The Wimbledon tournament must be getting pretty soft when that decrepit wreck we have been reading about all of these days, Bill Tilden, can win it again . . . . It used to be that golf was considered an old man's game, but it now appears that tennis has the call . . . . Big Bill isn't old enough to take up golf, or even Carl Shallo's favorite pastime, checkers . . . . The truth about Lloyd Waner's relapse, which caused the little outfield star to be left behind when his Pirate teammates started on their Western trip Saturday night, is that he was ordered back into the lineup too soon and against his own better judgment . . . . Every time Young Corbett, of Fresno, Cal., beats another welterweight champion, the boxing fans say "Ho, hum!" and yawn it off . . . . That's what the guy gets for having been born a southpaw . . . . This week is no different than any other week except that during it a lot of golfers will watch Bobby Jones show 'em how to play the game in the National Open at Minneapolis . . . . And Gallant Fox will win the $75,000 classic at Arlington Park, Chicago, on Saturday . . . . Sammy Mandell, who defends his world lightweight title against Al Singer in New York next week, is what is known as a born boxer . . . . He does things naturally and easily and instinctively does them in the right way . . . . He has had only one tuter in his entire career, and that a good one, Jack Blackburn, the Negro former boxing master . . . . Sammy started his career by knocking out seven of his first nine opponents by bewildering them with his left hand and rendering them easy victims for a finishing punch . . . . In recent years, he has been strictly a boxer, and one of the best in the business.—HARRY KECK.

. . . the war against Spitting is a crusade of decency . . . join it. smoke CERTIFIED CREMO!

One of many actual photographs of "spit-tipping" cigar makers. The above picture was taken in Philadelphia, Pa., April 1, 1930. An affidavit from the photographer is on file, showing that this workman used spit in making a cigar.

Over 7,500 cigar factories are registered by the U. S. Government. Over 7,400 of these hand-roll cigars, producing 50 percent of the output. Every hand-rolled cigar—made by American Cigar Co. or anyone else—is subject to the possible danger of "spit-tipping." Certified Cremo is absolutely free from spit-tipping—No Cremo is made by hand.

Certified Cremo is a really wonderful smoke—mild—mellow—nut-sweet! Every leaf entering the clean, sunny Cremo factories is scientifically treated by methods recommended by the United States Department of Agriculture. And its purity is safeguarded along every step of the way by amazing inventions that bind, roll, wrap and tip the cigars!

THREE CLUBS BATTLE FOR LEAD IN AMERICAN

MACK PREDICTS CLOSE FIGHTS FOR FLAGS

By CONNIE MACK

Manager World Champion Athletics

PHILADELPHIA, July 7.—As the half way mark in the American League race is reached the emotions of baseball followers are tugging at them, aiming to gain an advantage over the pennant fight.

The Athletics, Senators and Yanks are bunched, and everything points to the second half of the race being as much of a tax on the wits, bone and sinew of the contenders as the first part.

It is a matter of regret that Cleveland has met with a severe slump that resulted in its percentage receding downward.

INDIANS SLIDE DOWN

Three weeks ago the Indians were on top and gave every indication that they would be in the fight down to the very finish, but they had a slump and when they began to feel the loss of so many valuable players over a long stretch they continued to drop game after game and fall to the .500 mark.

I look for Cleveland to improve on its coming home stay and it may fight its way back to the leaders yet. It is unfortunate as a strong team and will be hard to defeat when its normal strength returns to the line-up.

As we go into the last half of the race the Athletics, New York and Washington are virtually neck-and-neck and it looks as if they will be that way down to the ebbing days of the fight.

PLAY CONSISTENT BALL

These three contenders have played consistently in the last six or eight weeks and show they are no flash in the pan, so fans can expect them to fight down to the wire and it may be the last week of the race before the championship is decided.

Serious accidents to one or two players of a contending team may put that club out of the race, so fans are watching the daily events with eagerness. Some interesting baseball has been played in the second division. For instance the Boston Red Sox, who have finished last so often, made a brilliant stand at home against western foes and wiggled out of the cellar.

It is rapidly soaking in that Manager Herbie Wagner has one of the most powerful pitching staffs in the circuit and it has been the commendable and consistent work of his corps of boxmen that enabled the Red Sox to win games.

MUST INVADE WEST

The three leaders are Eastern teams and they soon go on the road for their second invasion of the West. These Western teams are certain to give them the best that is in them.

No contender can afford to lag and this second invasion of the West may make or break one of the teams now up with the leaders.

While it still looks like a three-club race in the National League the race just now is not as close as it is in the American League. The Cubs and the Robins have pulled away from New York and St. Louis.

The Eastern contenders have an edge because they finish at home. Nevertheless it is going to be hard to bump off the Cubs.

The Cubs now are playing with their old swing and never looked better than at present. When it is pointed out that they made their recent great rally that carried them into the lead without the services of Rogers Hornsby it shows what a powerful team it must be.

Yet a lot of things can happen before the National League race winds up. The Pirates, for instance, are beginning to get some of their ill and injured players back into the lineup and they cannot be considered out of it yet.

BUC STARS RETURN

The Pirates have a lot of strength and once this strength is in the daily lineup it is going to make them far more difficult to defeat than it was in the weeks when nearly every department on the team was riddled by incapacitated players.

Therefore there is plenty of fighting in both leagues to intrigue the fans and as I talk with baseball followers none of them have the attitude that their favorite club is out of the race.

After all pennant races are decided in the last half of the season, no one club in either league had any distinct advantage in the first half, and the two pennants are going to be won and lost in the last part of the race.

WASHINGTON, July 7.—There is nothing certain about baseball except the umpire is always right. The Phillies are the heaviest slugging team in the National loop but when you start looking for them in the league standing, you have to go down to the bargain basement. The Phils hammer the baseball all right, but they got their ideas on defensive baseball from the Battle of Bull Run. Another thing is the Phillies ball park which is about the size of a Tom Thumb golf course. A bunt on any other field is good for a three-bagger there, and they could remodel the Phillies' grandstand into a telephone booth.

Ruth Tells How to Play Difficult Sunfield

By BABE RUTH,

Baseball's Highest Salaried Player.

The toughest thing about the outfield and the toughest spot on any team is the sunfield. Some fellows just take to playing the sunfield naturally. Others never do get the knack of it. When fellows as experienced and as good as Hack Wilson lose balls in the sun, and lose ball games because of it, I guess there's an excuse for kids to do it now and then. But, naturally, you want to do the job right, if possible.

Naturally, the best thing in the world for playing the sunfield is a pair of smoked glasses. Most big league outfielders use them and once you become accustomed to them you can see through the glasses almost as well as you can with the naked eye.

AVOID EXTRA BASES ON HITS

Lots of times, though, glasses are not available and now and then the sun is likely to hit in any field and catch a fellow without his glasses. In the picture you will notice I have Mac posed with his gloved hand held high above his head, the fingers separated just enough to let light between but closed tightly enough to shut off the direct rays of the sun. That's the best roung-and-ready shading device I know.

Here's the secret. Hold the gloved hand as high as possible so the rays that come between the fingers will be diffused before they strike the eye. Turn sidewise to the sun, if possible, in making the catch, so that the sun rays that come through the glove will strike across your face rather than directly into your eyes.

And when you're making a catch in the sun, take the ball in front of you. That's so, if you miss it, it won't roll past you and go for extra bases.

CIRCLE BALL IN MAKING CATCH

Here's another trick in sunfielding without glasses. Whenever a fly ball is hit, circle it, if possible. What I mean is don't charge directly toward the ball. Run to the side and then come in at an angle. In that way you avoid looking directly into the sun.

Just remember this. You, nor any one else, can look directly into the sun and make a catch. It just can't be done. Consequently, it's foolish to try it. Better let a ball fall safely in front of you for one base than go charging in and then lose it and have it go over your head for three bases.

Get glasses if you can. You can buy a pair of smoked glasses that will do the work for 25 or 50 cents. And once you get glasses practice with them. It isn't easy to use them. At first they distort things and make them look queer. But you'll get used to them after awhile.

And sun glasses are important. Even with glasses you see fielders lose balls sometimes.

FINE AWARDS AWAIT NET VICTORS

By PAUL G. SULLIVAN

Twenty-eight valuable prizes will be awarded winners and runners-up in the various branches of competition in the Sun-Telegraph revival of the Pittsburgh public parks tennis championships beginning a week from today on the courts of Schenley, Highland, Olympia, West, Riverview and Frick Parks here. The list is headed by an all-expense-paid trip to the national public parks championships at Washington, D. C., for the captor of the Steel City men's singles title, and an identical jaunt for the victor in the women's singles division.

The Washington trips include railway tickets, Pullman accommodations, board and lodging at a hotel or club to be selected as headquarters by the national tournament committee, and reasonable allowance for entertainment arranged in connection with the competition, while the player remains in the running.

TROPHIES OFFERED

In addition to the right to represent Pittsburgh in the nationals, the respective premiers will each cop a leg on the new Pittsburgh Sun-Telegraph public parks challenge trophies, symbolic of local titular honors in men's and women's municipal racqueting. These trophies must be won three times, not necessarily in succession, for the gaining of permanent possession.

There will be gold medals for the men's and women's championships in each of the six parks on the rectangles of which contesting will be sponsored, and silver medals will go to the various runners-up. These trophies will be suitably inscribed with record of the owner's achievements in the tourney.

DEADLINE NEAR

Tardy aspirants to Public parks laurels will do well to take heed of the fact that Wednesday midnight is the absolute deadline for entry into the Sun-Telegraph milling. Blanks must be in the hands of the Tournament Editor by the designated hour or disappointment for the prospective competitor will be in order.

Fill out the entry coupon in today's edition and mail it in at once for a crack at real net distinction, handsome mementos of victory, and an invasion of the national capital as Pittsburgh delegate to the Public Parks jousting for the championship of the United States!

Maxie Injured By Foul Punch

BERLIN, July 7.—(INS)—Max Schmeling, world heavyweight champion, suffered a rupture of veins in his left side when Jack Sharkey fouled him in their fight for the title, it was stated today in a medical certificate of his condition issued by Prof. Wilhelm Baetzner, surgeon at Berlin University.

The injury will necessitate a complete rest of two or three months and perhaps an operation, it was said.

"Schmeling surely will be able to fight again," Dr. Boetzner said. "Decision as to the operation will be made after the period of rest."

The second half of the West Penn League title race will get under way this evening with a bang. Two games are scheduled and with a compact loop, there is every reason to feel that the race is going to be one of the most sensational to be flashed in this neck of the woods in many years.

Verona Community, which made such a great comeback in the first half, will travel to Whitaker. It is said that Vogt has a real club in the second half and that Bill Bright's sluggers are going to have a fight on their hands.

ACES FACE TEST

The other game will bring together Universal and the Homestead Aces, with the game scheduled for West Park. It is also stated that Fertig is going to make a real smack at the second half title.

Trying to settle that Central League championship is the task ahead of Honus Wagner Tomorrow evening at Dean Field, Allegheny Collegians and the Bohe Board of Trade will battle. Should Bohe win, the race will be over. Fl ntex is awaiting the verdict with interest. Manager Johnny Hornyak is going to pitch King, while Tom Carson will surely give this important assignment to Walter Shee.

BIG GAME LOOMS

Wednesday, the big game for the Western Division title in the Steel City League will be fought when Demor and the Observatory Civics clash. The venue will be decided when the rival managers meet today.

In the City League, Pleasant Valley travels to Olympic Park to meet Book Shoe. Homewood meets J. L. Thomas at Dean Field, and the Jimmy Smith club plays one of its last games at Woodman Field opposing the W. O. W. aggregation.

Pitcher Carl Stewart, now that the Jimmy Smith Club has passed out of the picture in the City League, has rejoined his old teammates, the Homewood Club, and will help Semler and Steele to annex victories for that outfit.

The Homestead Grays travel to Clarion tonight to play the Clarion team. The game is sponsored by the American Legion of that section.

The Homestead Grays journeyed to Jamestown, N. Y., yesterday and defeated the independent club of that place, 3 to 1. W. O. W. defeated the North Side Civics, 8 to 5, and the North Side Elks defeated Garfield twice, 7 to 6 and 8 to 3.

Reick-McJunkins walloped Banksville, 11 to 4. Iroquois defeated St. John's, 6 to 5, and the Christie Club trimmed Lindmore, 14 to 4.

PIRATES DROP TWIN BILL

though he has had only two days' rest. Meine suffered from a stiff neck when he tried to pitch in Pittsburgh on the morning of Independence Day. Herman Bell will pitch for the Cardinals.

Spencer's masterpiece was marred by a very questionable decision by Umpire Ernie Quigley, who refused to allow a double play which would have retired the Cardinals scoreless in the third round. Quigley, a stickler for technicalities, which have often marred his otherwise exemplary work, surprised everybody in the park, including the Cardinal team, by calling Jess Haines safe at second when the Bucco thought they had reeled off a double play.

WILSON HITS DOUBLE

Wilson doubled down the right field line with one out in the third. Haines then drew a pass and Douthit hit a "Taylor-made" double play ball to Spencer. Engle ran to the bag, took the throw and then stopped Douthit. The Pirate players were on their way to the bench when Quigley unraveled some of his red tape and threw the Bucs into confusion.

Wilson made a rush toward home as Spencer prepared to pitch to Adams. As the form of Wilson flashed up the line, the pitcher let fly with the ball. Wilson, however, started back the other way, but Glenn had to go through with his pitch or a balk would have been called. In the excitement he threw high and Wilson tallied.

CHAMPION BEATEN

COLOGNE, Germany, July 7.—(AP.)—Hans Dumbergen, German middleweight, scored a victory on points over Michael Bonagind, Europe's light-heavyweight champion, here yesterday.

GIANTS, CARDS WIN

The third place struggle between the New York Giants and St. Louis Cardinals remained unchanged as both teams won double headers. The Giants trounced Philadelphia, 10 to 8 and 6 to 2, standing off a ninth inning rally which brought the Phillies five runs at the end of the first game.

At Clarksburg, the Generals defeated Jeannette, 10 to 9, in a 10-inning contest. An unassisted double play by Leis, Jay first sacker, featured the contest.

Wheeling defeated Scottdale, 14 to 13, in 11 innings, a squeeze play sending the winning run across.

In a regulation nine-inning game, Fairmont slammed out a 7-to-2 victory over Cumberland, Walters limiting the Colts to five hits.

Long's Sport Comment

clean-up made in those two sports by American players in England this year is the most complete ever accomplished in any country by visiting contestants.

On top of Bobby Jones' open and amateur golf conquests, United States entrants swept everything before them in the Wimbledon tennis tournament, winning the championship in men's singles, men's doubles, women's singles and women's doubles, while an American woman, Miss Elizabeth Ryan, shared in the capture of the mixed doubles with Jack Crawford, of Australia. Bagging four titles out of five and sharing in the fifth comes close to being a complete job.

Bill Tilden

THE OUTSTANDING FEATURE of the tournament, following the defeat of Henri Cochet by Wilmer Allison, the youthful Texan, was the come-back of Bill Tilden, whose triumph over Allison in straight sets in the finals put him again on the Wimbledon championship throne from which he was toppled after winning it in 1920 and 1921. Tilden cannot be denied a place among Sportdom's age marvels of any period. Father Time was thought to have stopped him when he began to slip in 1926 and 1927, and some of the critics have since been referring to him in the past tense as a racquet star, but here he is at the age of 37 topping the whole tennis world by virtue of a sensational victory over a field that embraced the youth and class of several nations. The need for Tilden's presence on America's Davis Cup team is more apparent than ever. He refuses to be a candidate for a place, but his services ought to be obtained by a method suggested here many weeks ago. It is the duty of the American Davis Cup powers to draft him.*

RAIL MERGERS HARD HIT IN CONGRESS

Legislation Fails to Pass Lifting Anti-Trust Ban; Holding Groups Target

WASHINGTON, July 7.—(AP.)—Advance toward national consolidation of railroads was well nigh brought to a complete though perhaps temporary halt by events and developments associated with the congressional session just closed.

A single proposal came to a final vote in one house and other projects, all of a nature tending to cast doubt on the future of the national merger program, were left hanging.

Ten years ago Congress by great majorities ordered the Interstate Commerce Commission to prepare means for throwing all of the country's rail systems into 18 or 20 giant pools, and empowered it to set aside anti-trust statutes for the purpose.

POWER RECALLED

One house of the Congress just adjourned voted by an unexpected majority to withdraw the power the commission holds to override the anti-trust laws; the other house of the same Congress, hesitating to go that far, was torn by a demand for action nullifying the only extensive rail merger the commission has approved.

Adjournment buried doubts and differences for the time being, though it left a congressional committee busily delving into the modern methods of railroad finance which came under hot fire during the controversy.

Meanwhile, aside from Congress, the four chief railroad interests which had asked the commission to sanction specific plans for merger actions withdrew their applications to await developments.

HOLDING COMPANIES

The new agitation over railroad consolidation was incited primarily by an extraordinary report to Congress from the Commerce Commission last fall, asking investigation of railroad financing.

Joseph B. Eastman, chairman of the commission's legislative committee, following up the report, explained to a House committee that there was "danger of complete loss of public control of the process of railroad unification" from the remarkable use being made of the holding company device.

As the Congressional inquiry disclosed, the holding company device has been astoundingly developed in the process, one corporation after another being superimposed upon predecessors, and vast quantities of securities being emitted and marketed with the investing public at each stage.

PENNROAD TARGET

The Pennsylvania company, through the Pennroad, appeared from the inquiry to have gone strongly into holding corporation play. However, the two remaining of the great Eastern trunk lines, the Baltimore and Ohio and the New York Central, remained clear and incidentally got during the winter specific grants of official favor.

The Baltimore and Ohio has been permitted to make outright purchase of the Buffalo, Rochester and Pittsburgh, and the Buffalo and Susquehanna, facilitating the ambition of its veteran president, Daniel Willard, to create a new Chicago-New York short line in northern territory. The New York Central got authority to consolidate its own subsidiaries, the Big Four and Michigan Central, and to buy up a whole group of short lines along its routes.

WALL STREET HEARS

That Underwood Elliott Fisher's June business showed substantial improvement.

That Public Service of New Jersey has attracted buying from excellent sources during its recent heaviness.

That International Telephone continues to meet with considerable liquidation, reflecting uncertainty over foreign business prospects.

That important traders still look for a comparatively quiet stock market, with indecisive trends, during the next few weeks.

New Era is Inaugurated By Changed Method In Financing

By MERRYLE STANLEY RUKEYSER.

NEW YORK, July 7.—The significant events of finance are frequently undramatic. The changes that alter the way that plain men and women live come quietly and unobstrusively.

For example, since the war there has been a radical change in the character of ownership in the United States. Title to corporate property has tended to pass out of the hands of an oligarchy of the super-wealthy and to be diffused widely among the multitudes.

Referring to this quiet, gradual process, T. N. Carver, sagacious economist of Harvard University, described the trend as the "present economic revolution in the United States."

SIGNIFICANCE NOTED

The broader significance of the offering today of 2,000,000 shares at $25 a share (of which 400,000 have been reserved for officers and employes) of Hearst Consolidated Publications, a new holding company embracing 10 of the most successful newspapers in the Hearst chain, the lucrative American Weekly and the American Newsprint Company, is that it is a step toward the mutualization of the great newspaper properties hitherto owned solely by William Randolph Hearst.

Recognizing the sociological advantages of partnership with patrons and employes, Mr. Hearst has set up a new corporate device to make the new community of interest feasible.

NEW TREND INDORSED

Far more important nationally than the sale of 50,000,000 of securities with the co-operation of a strong banking group is the indorsement placed by Mr. Hearst on the newer tendencies of finance.

Emulating the great public utilities which have successfully engaged in customer-ownership, Mr. Hearst has applied the principle to a great coalition of industrial enterprises, if newspapers may be considered industrials.

Though technically industrials, newspapers are of necessity impregnated with a public interest, and touch the lives of the people far more intimately than so-called public utilities and, in my opinion, more significantly and intimately than many of the institutions of government itself.

Moreover, though the public accept monopolistic public service institutions because there is no choice, the public in its newspaper preferences exercises freedom of the will. Newspaper circulations are founded on the habits and voluntary preferences of the public.

In most cities, the public can choose between at least two newspapers, and in the larger cities it has a wider choice. Accordingly, huge circulations through the year are proof positive of consumer acceptance, the intangible which profit makers in all industries sedulously seek.

ESSENTIAL BUSINESS

In times of recession, there is an increased tendency on the part of investors to seek out securities of corporations engaged in essential businesses. Newspaper making is one of these. There is no disposition at any stage of the cycle to discontinue or postpone newspaper reading.

In an era of high prices, newspapers bizarrely have persistently sold far below the cost of production, being supported to a large measure by revenues from advertisers.

Emphasizing the distinctly customer ownership phases of the financing, Mr. Hearst has arranged to make available the new 7 per cent cumulative participating preferred stock (participating up to 10 per cent) at the cashier's office of any Hearst corporation as well as at any of the offices of the National City Company, the Bank of Italy, Crocker First National Bank of San Francisco, Anglo and London Paris National Bank of San Francisco, the Continental Illinois Bank and Trust Company of Chicago, and the Bank of America of California.

In addition to stressing the customer ownership side, Mr. Hearst has invited his business executives, editors, special writers, reporters, copy readers and the whole miscellany of 20,000 persons directly dependent on the Hearst activities for a livelihood to subscribe on the easy payment plan over 24 months.

RECORD ATTRACTIVE

The proposed issue is rendered attractive by the splendid record of earnings over a period of years of these properties, which represent the cream of the most important chain of newspapers in the world. With more than 42 years of publishing experience behind him, Mr. Hearst is unquestionably the foremost world figure in popular journalism.

As a modest part of the human collateral behind the issue, I cannot take a wholly detached view. To those who want my hard-boiled investment opinion of the issue, I can say that when I was tentatively asked whether as an employe I would be interested in subscribing, I replied that I would take the maximum amount offered to me.

The employe-ownership phase is especially attractive, for it weds to the organization valued men and women, who otherwise might feel freer to drift with the tides. A widespread feeling on the part of ambitious persons that they are working for themselves and sharing in the profits adds to the dignity of professional labor, and is of immense value to the organization not only in elevating morale, but also in reducing the wastes of excessive labor turnover.

PUBLIC FINANCING GAINS

Mr. Hearst's move today constitutes a landmark in the history of public aspects of finance, because until now he was one of the few who adhered to the older system of sole proprietorship, whereas other companies engaged in public financing.

Henry Ford is another conspicuous example of those who have stayed apart. Though a Wall Street banking house some years ago offered to sell a billion dollars of securities of the Ford Motor Company stock ownership is still held exclusively by Henry and his son, Edsel. Will the Ford company be the next to step in line?

The size of the new holding corporation emphasizes the extent to which publishing has become a big business, with colossal earnings for the successful, and immense property investments. Publishing has passed far from the pioneer days when it reflected only the whims and idiosyncrasies of a not wholly responsible editor.

Many properties have become mere business institutions—over-organized and over-routinized. Mr. Hearst's rare genius has been in combining business acumen with editorial zeal and a flaming passion for espousing public causes.

In the new setup, there is no danger of the great newspaper properties being subjected to the direction of a mass meeting. Mr. Hearst, who has demonstrated these many years his amazing record as a profitmaker will retain the voting stock, and continue to act as pilot.

EARNINGS AMPLE

The "A" preferred stock is non-voting, unless the dividend should be omitted four consecutive times. The company has been earning the dividend on the $50,000,000 of preferred more than three times over in the last four years.

The new company is a Delaware corporation with an authorized capitalization of $100,000,000, divided into $100,000,000 "A" or preferred stock, of which half will be presently issued, and 2,000,000 shares of common stock, no par value, all of which will go to the Star Holding Corporation, which is ultimately owned by Mr. Hearst.

The other $50,000,000 of preferred stock will be reserved and will be issued only for the purpose of retiring outstanding bonded indebtedness at the call price. The preferred stock is cumulative up to 7 per cent and noncumulative on the additional 3 per cent. The book value of the properties going into the new corporation is $100,000,000.

Chicago Evening American, Pittsburgh Sun-Telegraph, Pitt Building Company, Detroit Times, San Francisco Examiner, Oakland Post-Enquirer, San Francisco Call-Bulletin, Los Angeles Examiner, Los Angeles Evening Herald, Seattle Post-Intelligencer, American Weekly, American Newsprint Company. Application will be made to list the stock on the New York Curb, the Chicago Stock Exchange and the San Francisco Stock Exchange.

EMPLOYES TO BUY

Of the total issue of 2,000,000 shares now being offered, 400,000 shares have been reserved for officers and employes, an objective Mr. Hearst long has had in mind. Many leading corporations have found employe stock ownership advantageous to all concerned, including outside stockholders.

General Motors, the Pennsylvania Railroad, American Telephone and Telegraph, United States Steel Corporation, General Electric, New York Central, Standard Oil of New Jersey, Standard Oil of California (and other Standard Oil companies), International Harvester, American Tobacco, Western Union, Procter & Gamble, Swift & Co., Eastman Kodak are among notably successful companies that have interested their employes in building up the business by having them become financially interested.

Such results as those already outlined having been attained during the years the Hearst employes did not enjoy the privilege of stock ownership, surely it is reasonable to figure that even better results will be brought about now that a new incentive has been furnished.

DIVIDEND COMES FIRST

It is worth noting that Mr. Hearst personally will not draw a cent in dividends on the common stock he owns until 7 per cent has been paid on the new preferred.

Since this new investment combines with its 7 per cent regular payment the possibility of an extra 3 per cent, it constitutes a safe investment plus a valuable speculative attraction.

Requests for the shares may be made at any of the offices of the National City Company throughout the country, the Bank of Italy, the Crocker First National Bank of San Francisco, the Anglo and London Paris Bank of San Francisco, the Continental Illinois Bank and Trust Company of Chicago and the Bank of America of California, as well as the cashier's office of any Hearst newspaper or corporation in the United States.

U. S. SECURITIES SALE HERALDED

WASHINGTON, July 7.—(AP.)—Secretary Mellon announced the first financing for the new fiscal year. The Treasury, through Federal Reserve Banks will receive bids for $50,000,000 90-day Treasury bills to 2 p. m. July 10.

The bills will be issued under the law that went into effect a year ago permitting the Treasury to sell the bills on a discount basis and redeem them at par when they mature. It will be the fourth issue of such securities which have been found a popular way of raising money needed by the government at a lower interest cost.

The bills will be dated July 14 and mature on September 15, the date of the third payment of income tax for the calendar year 1929.

"Last year, it is true, we exported more merchandise than we imported—and the excess was more than $700,000,000. But make no mistake about this: We enabled the foreign peoples—fully and amply enabled them—to pay us for this excess.

"We did so by sending abroad swarms of American tourists, by making possible large remittances sent by immigrants to relatives back home, and, briefly, by our excess purchases of a variety of services.

"The net result was that foreigners gained almost $400,000,000 worth of purchasing power with which to buy American goods and services."

TOURIST TRADE AIDS 'BALANCE'

Universal Service.

WASHINGTON, July 7.—America's "invisible" exports of capital and expenditures abroad in 1929 gave foreigners a tremendous purchasing power, Dr. Julius Klein, assistant secretary of commerce, declared over the radio last night.

Actual exchange of merchandise between the United States and foreign lands tells only part of the story in "balance of trade," he said, pointing out that exports of American capital, which are not tabulated by the customs house, are much in favor of foreigners, Dr. Klein said.

"Although we do not find it necessary to buy as much merchandise from foreigners as we sell to them, we make up the difference in other ways. By means of these invisible items, we maintain the foreign power to purchase American goods."

BEAR STRENGTH GROWS OVER HOLIDAY

Stock Market Declines With Important Shares Down 3—Trading Light

NEW YORK, July 7—(A.P.)—Only the bears seemed to have gained any strength from the triple holiday as trading in stocks was resumed today. The uncertain trends of last week gave way to an emphatic downturn. Important shares generally shed 3 points or more. Trading, however, was in light volume, although nearly twice as active as during the closing sessions of last week when the market was close to a standstill.

Speculators in the decline were cautious last week, not knowing what bullish development might appear during the three-day suspension, but news over the week-end contained nothing disconcerting to the short interest. Although nothing but reports of summer slackening of activity might be expected, bull more long holders of stocks appeared finally to have grown discouraged and there was a considerable accumulation of selling orders at the opening.

DEMAND DISAPPOINTING

"Investment buying, however, rarely makes the trend of the market, and the reinvestment demand from the midyear interest and dividend payments has been distinctly disappointing. The midyear settlement period was reflected by another tightening of call money today, which renewed at 2 per cent and mounted to 2½, then 3. The effects of a settlement date are sometimes not felt until about a week later, particularly when a holiday intervenes to delay the return of checks. Furthermore lenders who placed funds in the market for employment over the week-end did not find the renewal rate of 2 per cent very attractive.

Several commodities declined reciprocally with stocks. Wheat dropped more than 2 cents, getting down to the neighborhood of its recent lows. The day's news contained several chain store sales reports, most of which showed moderate declines from June of last year, when changes in the number of stores were taken into consideration. It is notable, however, that retail trade generally has been holding up much better than industrial activity. Chrysler shipments in June were reported at 28,407 cars, against 40,644 in May.

Among the widely moving issues, Ingersoll Rand, Allied Chemical and Case lost 8 to 12 points. Air Reduction, Gillette and Safeway Stores declined 5 points or more to new low ground and Du Pont also reached a new minimum. U. S. Steel, North American, Westinghouse Electric and Eastman, lost 4 to 5, and several commission houses continued to urge accumulation of stocks for investment, but it is generally acknowledged that the near future, at least, remains uncertain.

BUYING ZONE REACHED

The fact has been stressed in some quarters that the average yield of leading stocks has now exceeded the commercial paper rate by more than one per cent, which has been regarded in the past as an indication that the market has reached a buying zone.

The average yield of 90 issues used in the standard statistics averages is now in excess of 4½ per cent, while commercial paper is mostly moving at 3½.

Shares like American Telephone, Atchison, Chesapeake Corp., Consolidated Gas, American Can, and International Harvester sagged 3 or more. A better tone appeared by early afternoon, and Steel and a few others rallied a point or so.

HOW'S BUSINESS?

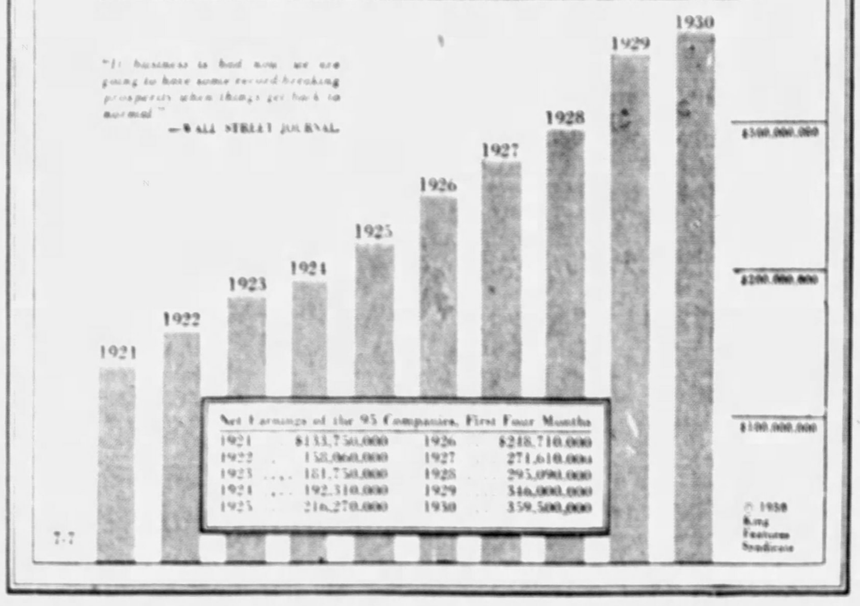
ACTUAL FACTS ON CONDITIONS TODAY

By FRELING FOSTER

Public Utilities are Breaking Records

The net earnings of 95 great public utility corporations during the first four months of 1930 are compared with the corresponding periods of the past nine years. They comprise virtually all the important companies in the United States which operate gas, electric light, heat, power, traction and water services. Source: U. S. Bureau of the Census.

The activity of these corporations is an index to general economic conditions because they sell us more than $2,000,000,000 worth of service annually. Both their gross and net earnings grow constantly. The net figures given here show that 1930 is running 4% ahead of 1929.



Coal Trade Depression Still Continues

By GEORGE H. SNYDER.

FOR SIX YEARS the coal trade has formed the one persistently dark cloud in Pittsburgh's industrial picture. Other industries have had periods of depression and have been forced to sole difficult problems but they also had times marked by a fair degree of prosperity. Coal has been in an almost constant state of gloom. With only two brief periods of relief, which occurred during the British coal strike and the American anthracite strike, coal prices have been low and profits have been negligible.

The conditions applying to coal mining companies in this district have been applicable to the industry as a whole except in the cases of properties enjoying exceptionally favorable locations or having the advantage of unusual working conditions.

Coal mining in Ohio has an even more gloomy outlook than in Pennsylvania. Illinois and Indiana operators tell much the same story as those in Pittsburgh.

Labor Problem Acute

AT THE BEGINNING of the six lean years, labor was the most frequently mentioned difficulty of producers in all the major fields except those of West Virginia and Kentucky. The problem of labor arose not from the exact amount per ton or per day being paid to miners in general. It was due to the fact that coal operators in Pennsylvania, Ohio, Indiana and Illinois were paying higher wages than producers in West Virginia and Kentucky.

The Northern operators were tied by a wage scale agreement made with the United Mine Workers of America. The Southern operators, with no union agreement, were able to cut wages and prices to a level at which the Northern mines could not operate at a profit. Had all the fields been fully unionized the Northern operators could have paid $7.50 a day as well as $5 a day. The wage scale would not have been a problem had every operator been compelled to pay the same amount. It was the failure of the United Mine Workers of America to organize all fields rather than the anti labor organization attitude of the operators that brought on the last coal strike.

Operators Win Strike

THE JACKSONVILLE AGREEMENT on wages expired on April 1, 1927. More than a year before this date the problem of wage cutting in the Southern districts became so acute that the union operators appealed to John L. Lewis, president of the Mine Workers for a modification of their contract. Following Lewis' refusal to discuss the problem, some of the operators continued to abide by their agreement. Others, chief among which was the Pittsburgh Coal Company, shut down mines and resumed production on a lower wage scale with men not affiliated with the United Mine Workers.

At the expiration of the agreement the remaining operators were unable to come to terms with the union, which demanded a continuation of the Jacksonville scale. The resulting strike has never been officially settled but the operators are able to get all the miners they need. The union has ceased to be a factor in this district and in other important bituminous fields.

Problems Still Unsolved

THE END OF THE COSTLY strike still found the coal industry in a state of depression. Even during the time when most of the Northern mines were idle there was no advance in coal prices. Huge stocks accumulated by consumers and the output of the non-union mines saved the country from a coal shortage. The trend of prices during the strike was downward. Several wage cuts since the strike have not enabled operators to show satisfactory profits under present market conditions.

Consolidations, the elimination of the inefficient producers, mechanization, better preparation of coal, freight rate adjustments and research all have been suggested as remedies for the industry's great problem of overproduction. The progress or lack of progress along these lines and the prospects for the industry will be discussed in future articles in this column.

GRAIN MARKET

CHICAGO, July 7—With sellers in a majority and demand slight in comparison, wheat prices underwent a decided setback early today. Favorable weather for spring wheat growth in Canada and the United States also together with auspicious harvest conditions for domestic winter wheat, tended to pull support out from under the market. Opening ⅛@1⅛c off, wheat afterward showed additional downturns. Corn, oats and provisions were likewise easier, with corn starting ⅜@⅝c down, and subsequently declining more.

At noon wheat wheat was 2¼@2⅜ net lower and corn ⅜@1⅝ down.

Oil Share Trust Injunction Granted

NEW YORK, July 7—Pursuant to the investigation of investment trust companies which Watson Washburn, assistant district attorney general in charge of the State Bureau of Securities instituted in May, an injunction was obtained against the Standard Oil Shares of America, Inc. The injunction was granted by Supreme Court Justice Charles J. Druhan, of Brooklyn, on a motion by Deputy Attorney General Henry B. Staples. A hearing will be held July 14, at which time Mr. Staples will move for a permanent injunction and the appointment of a receiver.

Enjoined in the same action were the brokerage firm, John Cabot McDonald & Co., John C. McDonald, president of both defendant companies, and Henry B. Swain, treasurer.

Analysis of the information submitted by the Standard Oil Shares of America, Inc., in reply to a Bureau of Securities questionnaire revealed "irregularities" which Mr. Washburn felt deserved immediate attention.

LONE STAR GAS SELLS OFF HERE

Stock Recedes as Street Hears American Natural Gas Deal Is Abandoned

Trading was light and prices were slightly lower on the opening of the Pittsburgh Stock Exchange today following the three-day suspension of business over Independence Day.

Lone Star Gas, leader of the fuel group, lost ground at the start of business, selling off more than a point on moderate offerings. Other fuels, however, were very narrow and only small fractional changes were recorded in the remainder of the group. The recession in Lone Star was attributed partly to reports that the proposed merger with the American Natural Gas Corporation will not be carried out. Rumors that a combination of the two properties was being considered have been heard in financial circles for several weeks, although there has been nothing official from the Lone Star side of the deal.

The industrials were quiet today, with prices showing a slight declining tendency. Absence of pressure was noted again and the small fractional losses were generally attributed to lack of interest on the buying side rather than to developments having bearing on the companies' operations.

The Savings Account that went to Europe!

SHE sailed June 21 from Montreal for a ten week's tour of England and the Continent. All expenses have been paid for, in advance, and there is a comfortable surplus remaining in her Farmer's Savings Account.

Some years ago she began making regular deposits from each month's pay check. A librarian's salary is not large, yet the total grew rapidly and in addition to her Savings Account she has several high grade bonds which she purchased through the bank.

A Savings Account, building capital from income, is a fundamental factor in any financial program. The Farmers Deposit National Bank offers its facilities and helpful counsel to ambitious people for the working out of their success programs.

Refining Companies Act To Cut Huge Stocks Of Gasoline

Several refining companies are curtailing their runs of gasoline during July in order to bring about a reduction in large stocks of product on hand. Prior to the meeting of directors of the American Petroleum Institute recently at which the question of excess supplies of gasoline was discussed, a few southwestern refiners had adopted reduced operating schedules for several months. Now other companies in different areas are putting curtailment plans into effect and it is understood Standard Oil Company of New Jersey and subsidiaries will reduce gasoline production 15 per cent during July. This movement may be followed further by large refiners.

Increased activity in two of its three major divisions so far this year, with prospects good for a continuation of present high rate in the foil division, indicates profits of Reynolds Metal Company for the first six months will be up to the level established in the first half of 1929. If the volume holds up in the latter months of the year operating profit for the full year should be up to the $2,733,894 obtained from this source in 1929. Only annual statements are issued. For 1929 Reynolds Metals reported net profit of $3,560,034, equal to $1.63 a share on the 768,750 capital shares.

New York Air Brake Company's earnings statement for the first half of this year, which will be made public early next month, should show net income approximately equal to current requirements for the period. Indications are results for the second half will be less satisfactory because of curtailed equipment buying recently, and the year's results probably will not cover annual dividends of $3.60 a share. However the present rate will be maintained.

Otis Elevator will be one of the important beneficiaries of the improvement in the building construction industry, of which further evidence continues to be shown. In 1929 a year of receding activity, Otis Elevator reported the largest profits in its history, equal to $3.29 per share of common against $3.50 in the preceding year. In the first quarter of this year, earnings were equal to 83 cents per share against 79 cents in the like quarter of 1929. Although operations have shown a slackening tendency in the current period quarters familiar with the company's operations express confidence that the full showing for this year will at least equal the results in 1929. The stock is on a regular $2.50 dividend basis, and the generous manner in which stockholders have been treated in the past augers well for patient investors in this organization.

Wall street in general while still almost unanimous in the opinion that a long pull buying zone has been reached feels that over the near term a lower price level seems to be in prospect. There are several developments over the course of the next few weeks which should temper any unwonted aspirations of bullishly inclined traders. The steel tonnage report, due on the tenth of the month, is expected to show another substantial decrease in unfilled tonnage. Second quarterly statements are making their appearance daily and in many companies results will be distinctly less favorable than looked for.

Companies whose natural gas prospects were responsible for a large speculative following in their shares some months back are reported to be under accumulation by interests who realize the vast possibilities in this field. Stocks prominently mentioned in this class are Electric Power and Light, United Gas, Columbian Carbon, Standard Oil of New Jersey, Columbia Gas and Electric and Missouri-Kansas Pipe Line.

FALL BUILDING PICKUP SEEN

NEW YORK, July 7.—Although building and engineering construction do not promise any material improvement in early future months, a survey by Standard Statistics says in comparison with last year's results the trend should turn moderately upward after summer, largely because of the weakness in the final 1929 months rather than from any newly acquired strength in 1930. In anticipation of this measure of progress in the second half year, the survey states, it is believed that the total value of contract awards for the full 12 months will show a reduction of around 10 to 12 per cent from last year's levels, as against an 18 per cent decline in the first five months.

Plate Glass Output Reduced in Belgium

WASHINGTON, July 7.—Commerce Department advices state that the output of plate glass in Belgium has been reduced to correspond as far as possible with the demand which remains quiet. Prices however for plate glass are firm.

Rolling Mill Co. Promotes Official

William Stillwagon, assistant general superintendent of the East Works plant of the American Rolling Mill Company, of Middletown, O., since 1923, has been made assistant vice president of the company.

NEW YORK CURB MARKET

NEW YORK, July 7.—The curb market drifted lower in an uninteresting session today. Considerable selling was in evidence at the opening, depressing prices moderately from last Thursday's close but operations for the decline failed to bring out much stock and trading fell off a lot.

Following is the list of transactions on the New York Curb Exchange, giving all stocks and bonds traded in (00 omitted in sales column of stock list; 000 omitted in sales column of bond list.

Coal Production Gains 7,000 Tons

WASHINGTON, July 7.—Bituminous Coal Production in the U. S. during the week ended June 28, including lignite and coal coked at mines, is estimated at 8,005,000 net tons, or an increase of 7,000 tons over the preceding week, comparing with 9,600,000 tons in the like 1929 week, according to the U. S. Bureau of Mines.

DAILY TRUE STORY

Dumb Dora

"B but D," said Stacey Carter, as Dora Acton passed down the path.

Carter's little nephew was with him and he had to be careful of what he said, as the little chap had big ears and a knack of repeating things to the wrong people.

"Absolutely," agreed Melton Garner.

Thad, the little nephew, ran over to the fountain at this moment.

"Beats the devil what a thundering big per centage of really doll-like girls are just about as intelligent as a doll," Carter went on. "Take the little Acton girl for example. When I said that she was B but D I wasn't telling the half of it."

"No?"

Carter was amused. His friend Carter had just married a rather plain girl, but one whose mentality couldn't grasp anything beyond what to wear and whose mentality was entirely limited to the addresses of a few beauty shops.

"Yesterday Carter went on, "Commodore Jones was showing a new sextant and this Acton girl stared at it in amazement."

"My goodness," she said. "I always thought that a sextant was a man who buried people at sea!' Is that one."

Melton Garner laughed moderately.

"She's an eyeful just the same, Stacey."

"Humph!" Carter muttered. His wife was coming up from the beach just then, rather bedraggled, and he couldn't help but notice as she stopped to chat with Dora Acton that friend wife was certainly no eyeful—unless one were looking for an eyeful of angles.

"I prefer to live with drama," he said.

"Which precludes the possibility of your ever becoming a hermit, eh, Stacey?"

"Oh, I wouldn't be a hermit," Carter answered, which gives you an idea of how close he came to being in the category of the dumb.

Marriageable Age

Now I knew and liked Dora Acton. There was never a moment of doubt on the part of anyone with half an eye but what she was a beautiful girl. And, to be perfectly frank, she was rather dumb in a way. At finishing school she had learned things, but rather parrot-like. She could remember and repeat. However, she could never be classed as one of those keenly intelligent girls.

Dora was of the marriageable age, and she knew this just as well as anyone else. She was at The Beeches with an invalid aunt, said aunt being worse than no help at all to her in the matter of selecting, and landing, a husband.

There is no denying that a really intelligent matron can be of wonderful assistance to almost any pretty girl who is out looking for a husband.

Why deny that girls go out looking for husbands? Or, if you are a purist, let us say they go out looking for an eligible young man who will become friend husband. Of course, girls do this. I did. I am quite well satisfied with my success.

But to get back to Dora Acton. I liked the girl exceedingly. She came from my home town. I had been friendly with her mother, who died some years ago. Dora was like her mother, exceedingly beautiful, but not overly blessed with brains.

Mr. Acton had a small business and lived comfortably, but he was not rich at all and could never afford imported motor cars, cables, trips abroad, and such things, that Dora craved.

No girl is ever so dumb that she doesn't crave such luxuries.

Naturally I hoped Dora would make an excellent match. With her beauty, she should do so. I wanted to help her, but had little opportunity and, when I heard Stacey Carter telling Melton Garner about the dumbness of Dora I could have twisted his silly neck.

Melton Garner was a splendid chap, one of the Florida natives who had known more than all the northern land speculators combined. He had seen the bomb, as a sailor sights land, long before the landlubber could see it. He had held his own inherited short lands, mortgaged and bought other acres and then when those wise northern capitalists went entirely goofy and were selling Florida land at Times Square rates, Melton unloaded. He unloaded everything except his beach home and the 1,500-acre orange grove up state.

Match Impossible

And Garner loved Florida. He was proud of his state, proud of its history, proud that his forefathers had gone there and fought the Seminoles when young Abe Lincoln was a captain, and had remained to be among the white pioneers.

"Dora Acton," I said to George, "is just the girl Melton Garner ought to marry."

"You mean," answered George, who is friend husband, and, no fool, "that Melton Garner is just the sort of rich husband Dora Acton ought to land."

I nodded agreement.

"No sooner said than done—if you start this matchmaking, my dear."

I shook my head.

"I've helped make some lovely matches, George, but this is impossible. Melton Garner is keener than a cactus spine. If he suspected that anyone was trying to arrange a match for him that would settle it—he'd never marry the girl. Now of—"

"Honey," said my husband, "I cannot help you with your problem. I have something far more serious and important."

"I know," I said, "your problem is to go around in something under 90."

Nothing under 90, he agreed.

Melton Garner and Dora Acton had four dances on the floor that night and walked about the hotel terrace through four others. Dora never looked more beautiful, and I was greatly encouraged.

Didn't couldn't your brides until after the I dos have been said, he warned.

Dora was certainly happy.

His old time friend, Stacey Carter, didn't approve. I could see that. I heard him tell his wife that he was afraid Melton was going to make a fool of himself.

Beauty isn't everything, he said.

Beauty? Why, Stacey, his wife exclaimed, that Acton girl isn't very pretty, and she certainly doesn't know anything at all, whatever.

I forgot to mention that Stacey's wife has all of the money and isn't so dumb but what she holds the purse strings.

Everything was going along swimmingly with Dora and Melton until Beatrice Holden arrived at the hotel.

Beautiful Girl

Up to this time Dora had been, without argument, the most beautiful girl at the hotel. But Beatrice Holden left it in doubt. She was equally as beautiful. I have to admit that, and Beatrice Holden was a very brainy girl. There wasn't a dumb atom in her, so far as I could see.

It took Beatrice exactly three days to size up all of the male prospects and to decide on Melton Garner. She liked his looks, she liked him, and she was assured by Mrs. Ryedekker, whose husband knew everybody's financial standing, that Mr. Garner's fortune was away up in the plural millions.

Things began to happen.

Melton was with Beatrice as much as he was with Dora.

After a week he seemed to be a little more in the company of Beatrice Holden.

Now Dora was dumb. I've admitted it several times, but not dumb enough to let Melton suspect that she cared. She knew a few things and one of them was to never let a man suspect you are after him.

But twice I saw Dora when I was sure she had been having a crying spell and I felt terribly sorry for her. She was losing not only a handsome and agreeable young man, but a life of luxury.

We were sitting under the awning at the fountain one afternoon, having tea. Melton, with Beatrice, had gone out to play a twosome, quite forgetting his date for a speedboat trip across the bay with Dora.

It happened that Mrs. Ryedekker and I were discussing Melton Garner when poor Dora came out and sat down for tea. I could see that she was listening. Mrs. Ryedekker knew the Garners extremely well.

"He practically adores Florida," she was saying. "He goes north in summer, of course, but Florida is his own state and he believes it is worth more than the 47 others. He should, he made his fortune there and his people, ancestors, are part of the state's history."

"There's old Mr. Holden," she said. "I met him in California."

This was worse, bringing the talk around to Beatrice Holden, but one doesn't stop Mrs. Ryedekker.

"He's rabid on California," and she rattled on.

Hurries Away

Dora bravely sipped her tea and hurried away. I guessed that she was going to her room for a cry.

Perhaps I was wrong. Perhaps she was going to try and think, which would be an effort for the poor girl.

At any rate the very next night Dora was in a little gathering having late refreshments. Melton Garner was there with Beatrice close beside him. Someone passed sliced oranges.

"No, thanks," Dora said, clearly. "I can't abide California oranges, they have no flavor, the only oranges fit to eat come from Florida."

Beatrice Holden turned and glared at her.

"How can you be so stupid? California grows the very finest fruit in the world!" she said.

Dora laughed.

"California fruit is tasteless, the grapefruit, the plums and everything—it's all forced and not worth picking. Florida is where the fruits grow to perfection—"

"Of all things!" shrilled Beatrice. "Florida is just a cheap little poverty-stricken state where they have hurricanes and ignorant natives and wormy fruit!"

Melton Garner stood up and yawned. He turned to Dora and offered his arm.

"Let's dance, dear," he said to her, adding, "the ignorance of some people is pitiful!"

They went in and danced.

They danced nearly all the dances during the following week, and then they were married.

I was at the wedding breakfast. Oranges were served.

"These," I whispered to Dora, "are Florida oranges, of course."

She looked at me. Her delicate eyelids fluttered a bit.

"To tell you the truth," she whispered back, "I never could tell the difference between California and Florida oranges."

HERE WE FIND FLINT IN THE CITY — HE CAME UP HERE TO MAKE A LOAN, AS HE'S BEEN CALLED ON TO PUT UP MORE MARGIN ON OSSER STOCK WHICH IS FALLING IN PRICE — IT NOW LOOKS LIKE HE NOT ONLY STEPPED IN THE TRAP SET BY RENROD BUT JUMPED AROUND ON IT.
MR WHITEHEAD, I WANT TO BORROW A COUPLE HUNDRED THOUSAND DOLLARS FOR ABOUT 60 DAYS — I'LL GIVE YOU MY MOVING PICTURE STOCK FOR SECURITY — THE COMPANY'S ASSETS ARE ABOUT A MILLION
NO, MR FLINT, I'M AFRAID WE CAN'T TAKE THIS KIND OF COLLATERAL FOR SECURITY — I WON'T SAY IT ISN'T GOOD BUT WE'D HAVE A HARD TIME FINDING A MARKET FOR IT IF IT WERE NECESSARY
NO, MR FLINT, OUR VAULT IS A REFRIGERATOR NOW WITH FROZEN ASSETS — I HATE TO SAY 'NO' BUT I CAN'T SAY 'YES'
I DIDN'T THINK I'D HAVE ANY DIFFICULTY, CONSIDERING MY PAST PERFORMANCES WITH THIS BANK, TO GET A COUPLE HUNDRED THOUSAND DOLLARS ON MY OWN SIGNATURE BUT I GUESS THE ONLY TIME YOU CAN BORROW MONEY IS WHEN YOU CAN GET ALONG WITHOUT IT
WELL, IT LOOKS AS IF I WAS THROUGH — RENROD HAS ROMED ME OUT — JUST ANOTHER SCALP IN HIS WIGWAM — THERE'S TWO CONDITIONS ON WHICH YOU CAN MAKE A FOOL OF YOURSELF — WHEN YOU'RE IN LOVE OR MAD — AND I WAS BOTH

YES COLONEL, I'M TREMENDOUSLY DISAPPOINTED TO HEAR OF THE BAD LUCK YOU HAD IN SETTLING YOUR CASE WITH THOSE FILM FOLKS.
I HAD TOO MANY LAWYERS. THE ONLY TIME THEY AGREED ON ANYTHING WAS WHEN THEY EACH TOOK ONE THIRD OF THE $150 I GOT IN SETTLEMENT OF A $250,000 CASE. FINE STUFF, EH?
I WISH I HAD KNOWN ABOUT YOUR DIFFICULTIES. I KNOW I WOULD HAVE BEEN TEMPTED TO HANDLE THOSE LAWYERS WITHOUT GLOVES.
I THOUGHT OF THAT TOO BUT LAWYERS ARE TOUGH. WHILE YOU'D BE WORKING ONE INTO A CORNER THE OTHER TWO WOULD BE IN COURT GRABBING YOU BY THE WHISKERS WITH SOME TRICK LEGAL HOLD.
I KNOW. I'VE BEEN SOME OF THAT IN MILITARY CASES. ONCE IN ALGERIA TWO SILLY FELLOWS NEARLY UNDID ALL THAT MY MEN AND I ACCOMPLISHED DURING A TWO MONTHS CAMPAIGN.
I WANTED PROTECTION. WHILE I WAS HOLLERING FOR JUSTICE THOSE THREE BABIES TOOK ALL THE FILLINGS OUT OF MY TEETH.
BY JOVE, HOW I REGRET THAT I DIDN'T HAVE MY CORPS OF LAWYERS ON YOUR CASE. THREE OF THEM ARE IN EUROPE FOR ME BUT THE OTHER SIX—
ALL I GOT OUT OF THAT CASE IS A SWIMMING-IN-THE-HEAD FEELING EVERY TIME ANYONE MENTIONS LAWYERS. I FOUND OUT THAT A CLIENT IS SIMPLY SOMEBODY WHO LAYS AWAKE FOR A MONTH BEFORE HE STARTS A SUIT AND SIX MONTHS AFTER IT'S SETTLED.

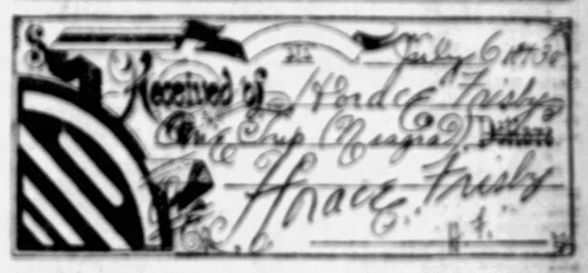
PRIZE POEM WINS TRIP TO NIAGARA FALLS

Frisby Award for Best Inspirational Theme for 1930 Awarded to Horace Frisby.



Editor's Note.—Several weeks ago Congressman Frisby announced that he would present a trip to Niagara Falls for the Best Poem of Inspiration Written by a Man of Unquestioned Character. Last night, blindfolded, he chose the winning poem from a basket full of contributions. Imagine his surprise and elation to discover that the winning poem was one he had casually dashed off himself.

"There has never been a better period since the Creation," says Vice President Curtis, "than that which awaits the young men and young women of today."

But what's giving the young men and the young women of today commendable food for thought is just how long it's going to keep on awaiting.

Another thing we'd like to know for sure is just who Chairman Wickersham is kidding—sometimes it seems to be the drys, again it seems to be the wets, and every once in a while it seems to be himself.

HARK! BEWARE!

"Am I contented when my task is done?"
Asks the sluggard of himself,
"No!" comes the answer, loud and clear,
From the depths of his better self,

"Yes, oh! Yes! I'm quite content!"
Says another voice within,
"Sit down and have a cup of coffee
Or, perchance, a beaker of gin!"

So, through life, I would advise
To the sluggard, one and all,
Pay no attention to your weaker self,
But turn your back to the wall.

Chorus

Turn your back to the wall,
Turn your back to the wall!
Pay no attention to your weaker self,
But turn your back to the wall,

Earlier Settlement of Election Dispute Seen

Justice John W. Kephart's statement on the eve of his departure for Europe that the Supreme Court is ready to advance the date of the hearing on the Luzerne County perforated ballot case is reassuring, and will be welcomed.

The hearing, originally set for September 29, was to be at so late a date that there was doubt if a decision could be had in time to have the ballots for the November election printed accordingly. With the date advanced much confusion will be avoided.

The situation is this: Francis Shunk Brown seeks to have many thousands of ballots cast in Luzerne County in the primary election thrown out as null and void because they were perforated, by order of the Luzerne County courts, as protection against fraud. If Brown's plea should be sustained by the Supreme Court, Gifford Pinchot's majority in his fight for the Republican gubernatorial nomination would be wiped out and Brown would receive the nomination.

The decision should be handed down in time to permit the citizens and candidates to adjust themselves to whatever situation it may create. If, as Justice Kephart anticipates, the hearing date should be advanced, the Supreme Court will be doing no more than the people of Pennsylvania have a right to expect.

Pittsburgh to Share In River Improvements

Pittsburgh has cause for gratification in the signing of the $144,000,000 rivers and harbors bill by President Hoover. Some of the money is to be spent on improvements in the waterways in this district, which means not only betterment in our navigation facilities but also the employment of workmen who might otherwise be idle and the circulation of additional currency in Pittsburgh.

Army engineers have vetoed some of the recommendations made for the Pittsburgh district. They have been inclined to conservatism, and shown reluctance to indorse projects calling for huge expenditures, even though the benefits would be great. Notwithstanding their attitude, there is assurance that millions will be expended in further improvement of the Ohio, Allegheny, Monongahela and some of the tributary streams.

It is interesting to note that President Hoover, in his comment on the bill, specifically mentions Pittsburgh as one of the cities to be benefitted.

It stimulates the imagination to find the President remarking that the improvements are to put the city on a 12,000-mile inland waterway system which will give Pittsburgh connection with points as distant as Chattanooga, Knoxville, Omaha and Sioux City.

Councilman Garland's Call for Fireworks' Ban

Councilman Robert Garland undoubtedly voices the opinions of most Pittsburghers in his demand for passage of a drastic ordinance prohibiting the sale of fireworks. The public is fortunate in having so forceful a spokesman on this matter in Council.

The city authorities should have learned the lesson by now that it is useless to palter with the fireworks matter as they have been doing during the last few years. The only way to accomplish results is to enact a firm, sensible ordinance and enforce it resolutely. It has been done elsewhere with success, and can be done here. The main thing is for the administration, when it says it is going to put a ban on fireworks, to mean it. After the heavy casualties that fireworks took this Fourth it is hard to see how the police or anyone else can fail to be convinced of the wisdom of prohibiting them.

Mr. Garland's suggestion that the County Commissioners request the other municipal bodies in Allegheny County to take similar action is a good one. It is to be hoped that all the cities, boroughs and townships will join hands in this commendable movement to save life and limb and reclaim the celebration of Independence Day from the deplorable character it has taken.

Dr. Maits' Timely Hint On the Weed Nuisance

For several months the Department of Public Health has been issuing a monthly bulletin entitled "Pittsburgh's Health," which is mailed to any who desire it. Bright and newsy from the outset, it has been steadily improving, and reflects credit on Dr. C. B. Maits, the director of public health.

No. 4, just off the press, is replete with interesting features, worthy of everyone's attention. Particularly timely is Dr. Maits' warning on the grass and weed nuisance.

It will perhaps be news to some of the citizens that the mowing of undesirable vegetation is required by law. When weeds and grass reach a height of a foot the owner of the property is liable to a fine of $5 a day for every day they stand unmowed.

There are good reasons for the ordinance. Weeds, filling the air with pollen, afflict people subject to hay fever with that very distressing ailment. Weeds harbor mosquitoes and stop drainage. On vacant lots a high growth of vegetation tempts careless and selfish persons to use the plots as dumping place for refuse that the weeds hide from view.

Unsightly and unsanitary, weeds have now attained the forbidden height. Dr. Maits' hint should be sufficient.

"Bugs" Baer Says:

Cal's a Cub Reporter

The first thing that Cal Coolidge should learn as a newspaperman is how to make out a swindle sheet.

"Bugs" Baer

The swindle sheet means the expense account. A good newspaperman is allowed all the money he can spend if he can borrow it somewhere.

A good story is anything that's five cents carefare there and back. Borrow a bicycle and always charge 'em for taxicabs.

Cal, you're allowed five dollars a day for meals and room. But you can always join a basket party going in your direction.

Otherwise, you have your choice of either eating or sleeping. We covered the Democratic convention in Madison Square Garden on Frankfurters that those 24 Underwood delegates got too weak to bite.

We did pretty good with the swindle sheet at the monkey trial in Dayton, Tenn., Cal. That last Cal doesn't mean California.

We soaked 'em 50 cents for coconuts to feed the monkeys. The money really went for ice cream cones. But if you mentioned ice cream cones to a city editor he would hit you so hard on the skull that you would have to buy seven hats to wear on the lumps.

Cal, when you go to a fire or a parade, never put your police card in your hat. We have found that it affords the city service employes a mark to shoot at. A guy with a police card in his hat is the first lad smacked by the police.

The only place a newspaperman pulls out a pad and pencil is in the movies. You can either be a Hollywood journalist or you can wear your trousers baggy.

We can arrange for you to get a good spot story of a riot. The best way to be an eye-witness at those things is to use a telescope.

The hours are very nice. They're the same they use in a clock factory. Once over lightly all around the dial.

It's not all a bed of roses. It ain't even a blanket of broccoli.

When you ask the managing editor for a raise you might as well be arguing with the Senate again. There's one thing that's important. You must always come back with a photograph.

You could be going down for the third time and a city editor would throw you a camera that weighed 60 pounds. If you interview Peggy Hopkins or Peaches Browning, you must always come back with a photo.

Cal, you have no idea of the things a newspaperman must go through in order to get a photo.

These are just a few of the minor details. When we get through making you a newspaperman you'd be glad to be President again at a smaller salary.

SUBTERRANEAN EXPLORATION

By Archibald Henderson

One of the most extraordinary gaps in scientific knowledge is our appalling ignorance regarding the interior of the earth.

Beneath our feet lies an unknown region. Is the earth a ball rigid as steel? Does it undergo periodical expansions and contractions, causing an alteration in our time? Is it a great ball of molten lava, covered with a comparatively thin crust of metallic mass? The miner has been digging deeper and deeper into the bowels of the earth. But he has learned little or nothing which enables us to determine the actual nature of the earth's interior.

We know little or nothing of any great importance beyond a distance from the earth's surface, inward, of about 6,000 feet! Is the interior of the earth of temperature absolutely zero, as some scientists contend? Or has it a temperature of 212 degrees Fahrenheit? The old theory, influenced doubtless by theological considerations, was that heaven was above, hell below us. And consequently, it was natural to infer that the interior of the earth was a hot, molten, fluid sea.

The modern view tends to swing in the opposite direction. The scientists who hold that the earth has a molten, fluid interior, are in the minority. Many geologists now maintain that the earth has an outer crust, say 30 or 40 miles thick, composed of rock or mineral substance. Beneath this there is believed to be a metallic core, which is under enormous pressure. But there are some who are in revolt against this prevailing view. Thus, J. Leslie Mitchell, in "Hanno," says:

"This theory of the earth's interior appears to me even more farcical than that of the Molten Fluidists. It is even more archaic in its concept; it is pre-Copernician. It restores to the earth its ancient dignity as the center of the universe. Both schools appear to conceive of gravitation as a mysterious force alien and apart, in the earth's bowels—a force drawing down upon itself in ever-increasing pressures, all material substance attractable. But gravitation presupposes repulsion as well as attraction. The earth-mass, it is reasonable to assume, is held together, not crushed together, by gravitation. The masses hold by attraction in a homogeneous framework; there is as definite an outward as downward pull; below a certain depth pressure must definitely decrease."

If this theory be true, then the interior of the earth must be largely hollow, a sort of vast empty cavern, having the temperature of outer space.

Are there enormous pressures in the interior of the earth?

Do these pressures increase as we penetrate deeper into the interior?

So far, man has not been able to penetrate very far beneath the earth's surface. Morro Velha's great mine, in Brazil—the deepest of all mines—shows no appreciable increase in pressure at its deepest point.

The interior of the earth may be another Mammoth Cave, after all—honeycombed with tunnels, corridors and passages. It doubtless contains many great reservoirs filled with gas, heat and molten metal or lava. It is probably the home of many large bodies of water, great interior seas and oceans.

LISTEN, WORLD

By Elsie Robinson

This is going to be a poison pen article. It is deliberately written for country hostesses to clip and send to various summer visitors—with the fond hope that it will make 'em madder'n hops.

Mrs. Ben Williams suggested it—but it goes for practically every week-end hangout from Cape Cod to the Golden Gate. Mrs. Ben has a nice little place, just a few miles out. Not very big, but pretty as a doll house, big oaks and elms, scattering lilac shadows over its white walls. A scarlet rambler, twisting and spraying up the tiled roof, where gray pigeons coo, turning their iridescent necks in the splattering sunlight. A scrap of green lawn, flower bordered, gay as an Italian 'kerchief. And a bit of a pool where goldfish swim and scraps of sky float slowly, like blue lilies.

A treasure, that little country home. It has taken Ben and the missis eight years to pay for it. And all that time they were planning how some day, when everything was ready, they would share it with their friends. The gorgeous week-ends they'd have. What a sweet rest it would mean for poor, tired Jane and Ed, and Mary and Al. Lazy gossip in the cool living room—lovely evening hours about the pool when the moon bloomed, like a great magnolia, in the purple mystery of the night. How good it would be to have folks around!

That's how Ben and the missis planned. They're still planning, but on the reverse. For now what they want is a sure-fire recipe for keeping folks away.

Didn't their friends enjoy the place? They did, indeed. But how? Going to the country meant going loco to the city folks. Wait to be invited? Not they. They arrived in droves. And five minutes after they arrived the pretty guest room looked like an ill-kept municipal dump. Clothes scattered all over the place—shoes on the bed—lipstick smears on the lace covers—a scum of powder and dust and soap on everything. But that wasn't a patch on the living room. Books, paper strewn around—dropped helter-skelter. Cigaret burns in the rugs. Busted phonograph records. Cocktail rings on the cherished mahogany. Ben and the missis do not drink themselves, but what's a week-end without gin, say the guests, unloading a case full.

And the garden! Roses yanked off regardless of broken bushes. A gouged lawn, a trampled pansy bed. Hammock in shreds. And a fishing party in the pond! As for the kitchen—fill in the blanks yourself. Sunday after Sunday Mrs. Ben stewed over the stove and sink while the Sunday visitors made whoopee elsewhere.

Why did they invite such rowdies? That's the funny part of it. They aren't rowdies, normally. They have charming homes of their own in the city and are mighty choosey about them. No cocktail rings on their mahogany, you may be sure! Indeed they do very little entertaining of any sort. "We're awfully sorry—we'd love to keep you over the night, but you know how crowded these apartments are!" So the city folks guard their privacy and possessions. But it never seems to occur to them that country folks also have a right to privacy and possessions. Down they come in swarms, as uninvited as the locusts. But what they do to a well organized home makes any locust look like a piker. Therefore, this letter.

Worst Story I Have Heard Today

By WILL ROGERS.

If a guy don't know anything about fixing a car, he ain't got much business driving one. But some fellows have to drive and yet ain't got time to learn what makes the car go. Well, there was a case of this kind where a fellow named Monty was driving an inexpensive kind of car. It got so the engine knocked, and his wife says, "Monty, the noise of that engine knocking drives me wild. Can't you do anything about it?"

"I'll see," he says.

So while she was eating lunch he went out and hammered and tinkered, and when they was going down the road again a few miles, he says, "Say, Ethel you don't catch that knock so distinctly now as you did, do you?"

"No," she says, "I can't say I exactly notice it so much. You're getting to be quite a mechanic. How did you fix it?"

"Fix it? Well, I didn't exactly fix it, but I loosened the two fenders and the right front door a little."

The Rhyming Optimist

Put Them Aside

Put them aside,
The thoughts of all you lost,
The vanquished dreams, the little hopes that died
Like pleasure boats, storm-tossed.
Put them aside.

Put them aside,
The shadows that may be
In years to come, without Love's hand to guide;
Fear's clutch, doubt's agony,
Put them aside.

Cling but to this:
Hopes wane, but not your trust;
You see dreams die, and yet life still holds bliss.
God's plans are wholly just;
None go amiss.

Put them aside,
All thoughts of fearful things
That leave your spirit's thirst unsatisfied,
The doubts that bind your wings . . .
Put them aside!

Text For Today

For we are saved by hope: but hope that is seen is not hope: for what a man seeth, why does he yet hope for? But if we hope for that we see not, then do we with patience wait for it.—Romans viii:24, 25.

THE SCIENCE OF LIFE

By H. G. WELLS
In Collaboration With
Prof. Julian Huxley and George P. Wells.

Even today, Mr. Everyman, faced with the issues involved in a cousin marriage, is no longer standing in fear before a superstitious mystery.

He can begin to weigh the risk and the advantages in the rational spirit in which he would approach an investment or a business undertaking. He can consider his forefathers and weigh the quality of his prospective relations-in-law.

H. G. Wells

10. Reversion to Ancestral Type.

Another matter that we may profitably discuss in the light of recent discovery is the question of Reversion. If a number of fancy breeds of an animal or plant be turned loose, the population tends to revert to the ancestral wild type from which they have been derived.

The pigeons of London and Venice are mostly colored more or less like the blue rock pigeon, although they were originally liberated as fancy breeds. Sweet peas may revert to the wild purple flower-color, and so on.

This tendency, being in apparent opposition to evolutionary progress, has been made much of by the opponents of evolution.

"It has been found that every 'variety' produced artificially, if left to itself for a few generations, reverts to the original type"—we quote from an American Fundamentalist work, published in 1922.

Let us point out at once that this latter statement is a distortion. Reversion only occurs when different varieties are crossed. It never occurs in genetically pure stock.

Let us analyze a simple example. It is sometimes found that when a black rabbit is mated with an albino, both from pure breeding stocks, the offspring are neither black nor white, nor are they an intermediate grey or piebald; they are a brownish color like wild rabbits.

This occurs sometimes, not always. In such a case we are simply dealing with the shuffling of two gene-pairs. There is one recessive gene which prevents any kind of pigment formation in the rabbit, even in its eye, and which produces albinos.

There is a second and quite unrelated recessive gene which blackens any pigment that may be formed. Now, since both these genes are recessive, the first cross-bred generation is normal, i. e., grey-brown; the black parent has introduced the dominant gene for pigment-formation, while the albino has introduced the dominant gene for brownness.

If these so-called reverted brown rabbits are inbred they will produce a mixed generation, including blacks and albinos in the proportion of nine browns and three blacks to every four albinos. The brown color, being dominant to the other two, will be in a majority in the resulting population.

Evidently there is nothing very mysterious about this "tendency" to reversion. The ancestral type simply turns up as one of the possible arrangements of the genes which the two parents have contributed.

Moreover, it has little to do with evolutionary progress, because the crossing of distinct varieties is a rare occurrence in nature. Reversion is only observable under highly artificial conditions.

The case of the London pigeons is similar. A number of different fancy varieties were liberated and they bred together and one of the shufflings of their genes happened to produce the wild type. Since most of the variations were recessive the wild type increased rapidly and submerged the others.

And so with the sweet-peas, and with many other cases of reversion when domesticated races of animals or plants are allowed to interbreed freely.

One more point about the rabbits. The cross of black with albino does not invariably produce brown. The albino gene prevents the formation of pigment altogether, so there is no telling (except by crossing with other varieties, or from the pedigree) what color-genes an albino may not smuggle into our experiments.

If he is a bleached brown he will produce the original type when crossed with black, but he may be a bleached black or blue or chocolate or lilac, or even a bleached piebald, in which case the result of the cross will be very different.

Abroad With A New Yorker

By O. O. McIntyre

PARIS: Outside of the Bois—I love the woods!—one of the greatest charms of Paris to me is in its perpetual cyclorama of street scenes. They puff up in a sudden swirl, like a quick breeze in dry leaves, and die away as quickly. Every day there are dozens of jangles.

On the Boulevard Raspail, the Left Bank to you—across the creek to me—this morning a taxi driver with a sweeping blond handle bar mustache suddenly stopped his dilapidated cab with a lurch, stood up on his seat and began to gesticulate and shout at nothing in particular.

The usual group eddied about him. A gendarme strolled up, tugged slowly at his own mustache, and as slowly walked away. The driver finally leaped to the ground, gave his ancient contraption a swift kick, and then calmly drove away. The crowd melted and life went merrily on again.

In rue Lappe, where men wear the long visored cap and pink muffler of the Apache, a little while later a drunken man staggered out of a bistro and, using his coat for a pillow, lay down in the gutter calmly to enjoy a snooze. Some one placed a red rose behind his ear and the entire block doubled up in a gale of laughter.

A waiter rushed from a cafe in rue Duphot and hurled several small coins into the street, voicing the French equivalent of "Bah!" He walked rapidly up and down, pressing his hand to his forehead now and then in feigned agony. It was his protest over a patron's insignificant tip.

In the Place Vendome a helmeted figure bearing the insignia of the Republic was collecting small sums demanded for a parking privilege. The owner of the car in opera bouffe manner caught a strand of his luxuriant beard in the steering wheel. A saleswoman rushed out with a pair of scissors and snipped him loose.

The French extravagance in their advertising encomiums are a howl. A fly killer called "Cobra" is heralded on the bill boards as "Brilliant Extermine Magnifique." A suit of union underwear in a shop in rue Roche bore a placard: "Sensationnel—25 Francs."

Overheard in rue Daunou: "I stood up under a half dozen of the Side Car cocktails but when I drank one of those 'Meme Choses' it put me under the table."

Last night I saw the famous Mistinguett, the idol of the French revues, who owns the most celebrated pair of legs on the continent. She disports at the Casino de Paris—a washed out blond with a gin-husky voice and reputed to be past 60 years of age. When an actress in France passes 40 she "fudges" on her age and instead of becoming outmoded is venerated. Bernhardt, not by any means a spring chicken, was not as old as she claimed to be, and it was her years even more than her art that endeared her. Mistinguett's "boy friend" is Earl Leslie, a personable young American who as an actor would not last for a single matinee at the Palace. But he is featured in every revue with Mistinguett.

Near Rumpelmayer's today I saw New York's erstwhile Beau Brummel, Berry Wall, with his omnipresent chow dog. It was startling to see him without his huge puff tie which he dramatized in the halcyon days of Ward McAllister. He clings, however, to the choke collar, which is now decorated with an immense light blue polka dot bow. Mr. Wall for the first time is beginning to show the imprint of years, but remains a loyal boulevardier.

Millinery for ladies, which for several years revealed only the tips of their noses, now reveals the entire face to the hair line. The smartest dressers wear their hats far back on their foreheads. Somehow I prefer it.

For an hour today from a hotel window I studied a young hotel porter and a hotel maid who at intervals would rush into each other's arms in the court yard furtively to exchange hugs and kisses. That is my idea of "studying abroad."

I'm tricking the taxi drivers. They cannot understand my downtown addresses but all of them know the Hotel Continental. Wherever I want to go down-town I say: "Hotel Continental"—and walk from there.

ONCE OVERS

By J. J. Mundy

What do you say when someone comes to you with a story about another which registers the highest praise?

Are you glad to know that this person has merited the good opinion of others or do you at once get in a little dig which dulls the luster attributed to him or to her?

There are some folk who can't stand it to know that unalloyed credit is given another, no matter how true it happens to be.

They never think about how they feel to be knocked every time a bit of good will was voiced in their behalf.

Perhaps they have never done anything to merit approval.

At least to speak ill of another when others are saying good things savors too much of an envious spirit.

Of course there are some persons who are so fulsome in their expressions of praise of those they admire that they do actually antagonize those who hear.

But you ought to be able to hear a lot of good things said of your friend, and even of your enemy, without spoiling it by a mean, counteracting jab which only lowers yourself in the estimation of those who hear you.

In fact, your injustice is apt to set the ball rolling more in favor of than against the person mentioned.
